Foreword

The Directory of Canadian Urban Information Sources represents a first attempt at gathering together in one document, the sources of urban information in Canada.

We have tried in this document not to duplicate the efforts of other agencies. The Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research (CCURR) prepares a classified, annotated bibliography entitled Urban & Regional REFERENCES. Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation compiles a directory of opportunities for urban education in Canadian universities, listing programs offered, but excluding research activities, conferences and publications, etc. The Intergovernmental Committee on Urban and Regional Research (ICURR) has developed a directory of federal and provincial government departments dealing with municipal affairs, environment, housing, human resources, planning and local governments etc.

The focus in this volume is on selected readings, reference sources, directories, publications of current interest, university units, urban organizations, libraries and information centres. The term 'urban' is used in its broadest sense, (of, relating to, characteristic of, or constituting a city).

Information on organizations, university units, libraries and information centres was gathered through the use of questionnaires and compiled in the Information Resource Service. Gaps in the information obtained do exist. There are, of course, errors, omissions and shortcomings in this initial effort. We would be grateful to have any pointed out to us by users of the Directory as the document will be amended and updated in the future.

As it now stands, we hope this document will provide a useful information base on sources of urban information in Canada for urban researchers and the general public alike.

Acknowledgements

The Ministry of State for Urban Affairs gratefully acknowledges the cooperation received from urban organizations, libraries, information centres and universities in the preparation of this directory.

Sheila Protti, Ginette Forques-Chénier and the Ministry's Information Resource Service coordinated and carried out the research and editing.

1 Introduction

The material presented in this Directory comprises basic essentials, from readings to information on active participants, for individuals interested in urban affairs in Canada. The Directory is intended as a vade mecum for those wanting to search further. It cites references to published urban information and lists the chief library sources of such material across the country. Details are included about the main groups actively engaged in various facets of Canadian urban affairs. And finally, the Directory provides information about the universities where most of the teaching and research into the components of the subject is undertaken.

Urban Literature

This Directory provides references to published material which should be easily obtainable through a bookstore or library. These references should give the reader an idea of the varied components comprising urban affairs — the approaches to it through a variety of techniques and disciplines, problems and their analysis, and the topical issues of the day.

'Selected readings' is not an exhaustive listing of published urban literature but rather a compilation of basic works highlighting major interest areas.

'Reference sources' offers a selection of the more current bibliographies, directories and handbooks of value. For earlier reference works the reader is advised to consult Urban & Regional REFERENCES 1945-1969, published by the Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research. This document and its annual supplements is a comprehensive listing of the literature relating to Canadian urban affairs.

The ICURR Directory published by the Intergovernmental Committee on Urban and Regional Research pinpoints federal, provincial and territorial government agencies concerned and involved with urban areas. Opportunities for education in urban and regional affairs, edited by Ollie Crain, identifies courses and degree programs for the post-secondary student in Canada.

'Of current interest' publications sketch out some of the topical urban issues holding public attention. Although not included as such in this part, it is worth noting the value of periodicals, newsletters and organizational and scholarly journals. Many of these publications are listed with a particular organization or university in the Directory. They include Urban Research BULLETIN (Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research) and Contact (University of Waterloo). These periodicals are valuable in maintaining awareness of new research, publications, legislation, appointments.

On a different level, the organizational and scholarly journals can provide analysis of issues, technical accounts of on-going studies or reports of recently completed studies, long before the final monograph or dissertation stage is reached. The Albertan Geographer, Recherches Sociographiques, Civic Affairs, Canadian Welfare, Plan Canada, Community Planning Review, The Social Sciences in Canada, and Canadian Public Administration are all examples of such journals. Similarly, the user is reminded of the serial publications of the various learned societies — The Canadian Journal of Economics, The Canadian Journal of Political Science, The Canadian Geographer, The Canadian Review of Sociology and Anthropology, and The Canadian Historical Review, all of which include urban-oriented material from time to time.

Mention should also be made of the value of theses as information sources. Often they provide the only documentation on a subject, or gather together hitherto disaggregated data. Although these are not listed as publications, lists of theses are generally obtainable from the appropriate school or department. A regular listing of theses is found annually in Canadian Theses by the National Library of Canada, and in Canadiana. Copies of theses can be borrowed on inter-library loan from the National Library or, often, from the appropriate university library.

Libraries and information centres

Libraries listed are those with collections particularly germane to urban affairs and accessible to the public either directly or through inter-library loans. In addition, one should also bear in mind the libraries and information centres of urban organizations, many of which have good collections in specific areas. Noteworthy in this respect are the collections of the Canadian Council on Social Development and the Roads and Transportation Association of Canada. An information centre which should prove valuable to those seeking data is the new Data Clearinghouse for the Social Sciences in Canada. Also useful are university libraries. Those universities having special urban programs invariably have the appropriate published resources for their students, e.g., the University of Toronto's Faculty of Architecture, Urban and Regional Planning and Landscape Architecture, or Queen's University Institute of Local Government Studies.

Urban organizations

'Urban organizations' — includes details of professional associations, research councils and special interest groups. The urban organizations selected for inclusion meet one or more of four criteria:

- (a) national focus/scope,
- (b) national body of local or provincial organizations,
- (c) activities highly urban-oriented,
- (d) contributes specifically to the field of urban affairs.

With respect to the second criteria one should remember that there are groups at the provincial or regional level with similar aims and activities as the national organizations listed here.

Universities

The information on universities is based on replies to a mailed questionnaire. However, in some cases information was added concerning inter-disciplinary urban programs plus other programs deemed particularly relevant. Faculties, departments and schools referred to are those directly related to urban affairs. That is, they have a specific urban orientation. A helpful guide in this area is the previously mentioned Opportunities for education in urban and regional affairs at Canadian universities and community colleges.

Use of French and English

Names of institutions and titles of publications have not been translated but these entries are annotated in the alternate language as well. Universities are listed and described in the language of instruction only.

2 Urban literature

2.1 Selected readings

Ames, Herbert Brown

The city below the hill: a sociological study of a portion of the city of Montreal, Canada. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1972. 116p.

A detailed investigation of social conditions in a working class district of Montreal during the 1890's.

Axworthy, Lloyd, ed.

The citizen and neighbourhood renewal: a collection of working papers on planning with people in the inner city. Future City Series, report no. 3. Winnipeg: Institute of Urban Studies, University of Winnipeg, 1972. 328p.

An examination of methods and proposals for achieving a better form of citizen-based neighbourhood renewal.

The future city: a selection of views on the reorganization of government in Greater Winnipeg. Winnipeg: Institute of Urban Studies, University of Winnipeg, 1971. 54p.

A collection of papers showing the background to Winnipeg's reorganization, constitutional and legal aspects, as well as the considerations for administration, politics and the private citizen.

Axworthy, Lloyd and James M. Gillies

The city: Canada's prospects, Canada's problems. Toronto: Butterworth, 1973. 256p.

A book of readings divided into three sections dealing with urbanization, urban space and urban problems.

Baine, Richard

Calgary: an urban study. Urban Studies Series. Toronto: Clarke, Irwin, 1973. 128p.

A study of Calgary — its relationship to other urban centres and the effects of post-war rapid growth.

Baine, Richard P. and Lynn A. McMurray

Toronto: an urban study. Urban Studies Series. Toronto: Clarke, Irwin, 1970. 126p.

An introductory study of Metropolitan Toronto which describes some of the fundamental concepts and procedures of urban geography.

Barcelo, Michel, Henry C. Campbell and Dennis A. Young

Information for urban affairs in Canada. Ottawa: Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research, 1971. 80p.*

The results of a study by the Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research. Outlines the sources of information in Canada and abroad useful to Canadian urban management, and recommends methods for improved communication and use of data and information across the country.

Beecroft, Eric

Local government in Canada. Reprinted from Studies in Comparative Local Government, vol. 5, no. 1, summer 1971. pp.5-27.

Presents a basic outline of Canadian local government, its forms of organization, its responsibilities and its problems. The article is chiefly concerned with changes that will have to occur in the structure and role of local governments in order to respond to rapid population growth and the impact of technological development.

Blumenfeld, Hans

The modern metropolis: its origins, growth, characteristics and planning. Selected essays. Edited by Paul D. Spreiregen. Montreal: Harvest House, 1967. 377p.

A collection of papers chiefly on the metropolis and its planning, by one of the foremost city experts, written in a clear straightforward style. Includes essays on Montreal and Toronto.

Bourne, Larry S., ed.

Internal structure of the city: readings on space and environment. Toronto: Oxford University Press, 1971. 528p.

Collection of essays concerned with the internal spatial patterns and environmental aspects of contemporary urban form and life styles. The 57 essays emphasize Canadian and American situations and were chosen to provide a perspective on the range of approaches to and problems in the geography of the city. Contents are grouped into eight themes: images, patterns, processes, networks, communities, activities, problems, and prospects.

Bourne, Larry S.

Private redevelopment of the central city. Chicago: University of Chicago Press. 1966. 199p.

This study deals with the impact of private redevelopment within the central city of the Toronto Metropolitan area. Private redevelopment is defined as a continuous process of replacement in the structural or building inventory of the city. The redevelopment process in this building inventory is seen as an important facet of the complexity of changes affecting the modern city.

Bourne, Larry S. and R. D. MacKinnon, eds.

Urban systems development in central Canada: selected papers. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1972. 242p.

An anthology of research reports divided into five parts: definition of the urban system, structural characteristics, distribution of urban growth, transportation networks and the impact of growth on urban behaviour and the rural economy.

Bourne, Larry S., R. D. MacKinnon, J. W. Simmons, eds.

The form of cities in central Canada: selected papers. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1973. 246p.

The common theme of this anthology of research papers is urban development in central Canada. Specifically, it focuses on the spatial structure of the city, land use distribution, patterns of population density and migration.

Bryant, R. W. G.

Land: private property, public control. Montreal: Harvest House, 1972. 383p.

Although one of the most important facets of urban studies, land use is often accorded little more than passing reference in general texts on urban problems. This study is an attempt to pull together concepts from the wide-ranging field of landed property.

Canada. Ministry of State for Urban Affairs

Working papers. Ottawa. 1972-

R. W. Crowley

Labour force growth and specialization in Canadian cities. A.71.1 32p.

D. S. Good, B. W. Frankel

Income distribution and incidence analysis. A.72.6 53p.*

A series of multidisciplinary studies, undertaken by the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs on urban problems and policies.

Canada. National Museums of Canada. National Museum of Man. History Division

Urban history review. Ottawa. 1972-. Irregular. bil.

A retrospective review of Canadian urban development. Covers topics such as the development of Winnipeg, sources of information for urban history, etc.

Canada. Task Force on Housing and Urban Development Report.

Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1969. 85p.*

The task force, headed by Paul T. Hellyer, Minister of Transport, looked at housing, its numbers, costs and form, as well as urban development in the existing urban areas.

Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers

Man and resources reader. Montreal. 1972. 155p. bil.

A collection of articles on environmental and resource management.

Canadian Transport Commission. Research Branch

Passenger transport in Canadian urban areas. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. 92p.

Offers a general overview of urban transportation planning in Canada. Covers transport planning and urban travel forecasting methodology, the socio-economic effects of urban transport, transport subsidies, and public transport and new development.

Charles, Réjane

Le coût d'aménagement des zones urbanisées: le cas de la ville de Laval. Montréal: Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 1972. 106p.

Describes a research project in which the author employs a methodological tool for making decisions on the choice of development sites.

Conservation Council of Ontario

The urban landscape; a study of open space in urban metropolitan areas. Toronto. 1971. 128p.

A description of the Toronto urban landscape showing how other cities on both sides of the Atlantic have more successfully avoided urban congestion through the use of parks, malls, green belts, etc.

Crawford, Kenneth Grant

Canadian municipal government. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1954. 407p.

Reprinted six times, Crawford's work has long been regarded as one of the standard works in the field. This exhaustive study examines municipal councils, administration and finance, elections, personal property, taxation, assessment and many related subjects. Introduction by R. Macgregor Dawson.

Crowley, Ronald W.

"Canadian urban public economy". In Canadian perspectives in economics, edited by John F. Chant et al. Toronto: Collier-Macmillan, 1972.

Describes some of the theoretical and empirical dimensions of the urban public economy in Canada. The urban public economy is defined as the portion of the economic activities which takes place only through the decisions of local levels of government and not through the decisions of individual firms and consumers.

Draper, James A., ed.

Citizen participation: Canada: a book of readings. Toronto: new press, 1971. 464p.

A collection of essays which puts forward both the current theories and practices in citizen participation in Canada. Covers such aspects as ideology, change and intervention, concepts and implications of community development and learning, Indian participation, accounts of actual experiences, the neighbourhood concept, and application and analysis.

EZOP – Québec

Une ville à vendre. Québec: Conseil des oeuvres et du bien-être de Québec, 1972. 4 vols.

This series of four volumes provides an economic, political and ideological analysis of urban renewal in Quebec City. The study was funded by the Department of National Health and Welfare. (EZOP-Québec – Etude des zones prioritaires de Québec.)

Fortin, Gérald

La fin d'un règne. Montréal: Editions HMH, 1972. 397p.

The author describes the urbanization of the province of Quebec from the perspective of his own experience between 1956 and 1970. The collection of articles includes monographs, results of theoretical research and plans for social reform.

Gentilcore, R. Louis

Geographical approaches to Canadian problems: a selection of readings. Scarborough, Ont: Prentice-Hall of Canada, Ltd., 1971. 235p.

Besides containing essays on population, industrial location and growth, political organization and structure, this book includes a section devoted to cities as seen from a variety of geographical theories and analytical techniques.

Gertler, L. O.

Regional planning in Canada: a planner's testament. Montreal: Harvest House, 1972. 186p.

The author's writings on the theory and practice of regional planning in Canada over a period of ten years. A number of themes such as the impact of cities on agricultural land, the role of the provincial and federal governments, the urban-centred regions, ecology, and urban shadow are examined.

Henripin J. et J. Légaré

Evolution démographique du Québec et de ses régions, 1966-1986. Québec: Presses de l'Université Laval, 1969. 131p.

A new study of the demographic evolution of the province of Quebec. Using the 1966 Census, the authors emphasized variables such as birth rate and migration to obtain projections into the 1980's.

Jackson, John N.

The Canadian city: space, form, quality. Toronto: McGraw-Hill Ryerson Ltd., 1973. 237p.

A view of the physical characteristics and spatial relationships of urban environments. It encourages the reader to examine the qualities, the conditions and the potentials of a dynamic urban milieu.

Kaplan, Harold

Urban political systems; a functional analysis of Metro Toronto. Metropolitan Politics Series, study no. 7. New York: Columbia University Press, 1967. 320p.

This study is concerned with the municipal government of the city of Toronto, the first urban area in North America to be administered under a single government. The author examines the Toronto urban system from functional, operational and constitutional vantage points. A lengthy bibliography is included.

Krueger, Ralph R. and R. Charles Bryfogle, eds.

Urban problems — a Canadian reader. Toronto: Holt, Rinehart and Winston of Canada, 1971. 408p.

Collection of over 80 essays grouped under such subjects as urban sprawl, transportation, housing and conservation, forms of government and future technology. Particularly suitable for an introduction to a study of Canadian urban affairs. Includes an annotated bibliography.

Lamonde, Pierre, réd.

Région sud de Montréal: perspectives 1986 — problèmes de croissance et d'aménagement. Cahier du C.R.U.R. (Centre de recherches urbaines et régionales), no 4. Montréal: Presses de l'Université du Québec, 1973. 159p.

The summary of a study of the 18 counties making up that portion of the administrative region of Montreal on the St. Lawrence south shore. Comprises a study of the growth problems, a collection of basic data necessary to draft an official plan, and an examination of the prospects for development up to 1986 for these counties.

Lessard, Marc-André et Jean-Paul Montminy

“L’urbanisation de la société canadienne-française”. Numéro spécial. Recherches sociographiques, vol. 9, nos 1-2, 1968. 209p.

This special issue is devoted to the urbanization of French-Canadian society and looks at topics such as urban renewal, urban administration, etc.

Lincourt, Michel et Harry Parnass

Metro/éducation. Montréal: Université de Montréal, Faculté de l'aménagement, 1970. 149p.

The result of a research project proposing the integration of education with urban life in an activity corridor such as the metro urban transit of Montreal. The authors recommend further use of human and urban resources which are usually underutilized.

Lithwick, N. H.

Urban Canada: problems and prospects. A report prepared for the Honourable R. K. Andras, Minister responsible for Housing, Government of Canada. Ottawa: Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1970. 236p.*

A survey of present trends and possible projections in Canadian urban development to assist the federal government “to determine what, if any, role it should play in urban affairs and the likely consequences of such a role”. Presents a conceptual framework and analysis of urban patterns and problems if present trends continue. Report also explores the policy arsenal — past, present and future — for dealing with the urban phenomenon.

Supporting this volume are six research monographs: 1) Urban poverty, by N. H. Lithwick; 2) Housing in Canada: market structure and policy performance, by L. B. Smith; 3) The urban transport problem in Canada, 1970-2000, by D. J. Reynolds; 4) The urban public economy, by W. I. Gillespie; 5) The urban future, by A. Goracz, I. Lithwick and L. O. Stone; and 6) A survey of alternative urban policies, by L. D. Feldman & Associates.

Minetown, milltown, railtown: life in Canadian communities of single industry. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1971. 433p.

A study of 600 Canadian communities created and dominated by a single industrial firm. The author explores the links between economic resources, industrial structure and social patterns.

MacNeill, J. W.

Environmental management. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. 190p.*

A study of environmental problems and their implications, with particular reference to the roles and responsibilities of governments in relation to environmental management.

Mann, W. E.

Canada: a sociological profile. Toronto: Copp Clark, 1968. 522p.

A book of readings chosen to illustrate the sociology of contemporary Canadian society. Several of the papers are directly concerned with Canadian urbanization.

Masson, Jack K. and James D. Anderson, eds.

Emerging party politics in urban Canada. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1972. 212p.

Focusing their attention chiefly on Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver, the contributors describe how non-partisan groups have given way to citizen's organizations and political parties in Canada's urban centres during the last few years. Includes an extensive bibliography.

Michaud, Laurent

"Le déséquilibre urbain québécois: quelques suggestions pour une politique de réajustement". Revue de géographie de Montréal, vol. 23, no 2, 1969. p. 115-121.

Deals with the development of the urban triangle of Montreal — Quebec — Sherbrooke.

Michelson, William

Man and his urban environment: a sociological approach. Don Mills, Ont: Addison-Wesley, 1970. 242p.

A microsocial empirical study of how man expresses himself in and reacts to the urban environment in which he resides. Includes a bibliography of over 250 citations. Author attempts to present a synthesis of past research efforts linking the social characteristics and activities of people with the home, neighbourhood, and other aspects of the physical environment in which urbanites live, which have been and can be shaped by planners, architects, engineers, or other modifiers of the landscape.

Pearson, Norman

"From villages to cities". In The Canadians 1867-1967, edited by J. M. S. Careless and R. Craig-Brown. Toronto: Macmillan, 1967. pp. 621-638.

A short outline of post-Confederation urban development. Provides historical context.

Plunkett, Thomas

Urban Canada and its government: a study of municipal organization. Toronto: Macmillan, 1968. 178p.

Outlines problems and principal forms of Canadian city government. Intended as a working basis for more intensive studies. Appendices describe practical workings of seven Canadian cities. Some of the material is dated in light of recent developments.

Powell, Alan, ed.

The city: attacking modern myths. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1972. 271p.

A compilation of articles by 25 writers including Graham Fraser, Miriam Waddington, N. H. Lithwick and Stephen Clarkson. Some of the "myths" investigated are zoning laws, neighbourhoods, poverty and crime. The work was commissioned by the University League for Social Reform.

Putnam, Robert G., Frank J. Taylor and Phillip G. Kettle, eds.

A geography of urban places; selected readings. Toronto: Methuen, 1970. 462p.

A selection of readings which indicates concepts and analytical techniques available for an examination of the urban environment. The three sections consider the definition of urban geography; the origin location characteristics of cities; the economic base of cities; and the effects of urbanization.

Quarry, Andrew

The future city. Winnipeg: Institute of Urban Studies, University of Winnipeg, April 1972. 73p.

An analysis of the new city government scheme in Winnipeg and how it relates to the central question of implementing change in the institutions of government.

Rowat, Donald C.

The Canadian municipal system: essays on the improvement of local government. Carleton Library, no. 48. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1970. 242p.

A discussion of local government in Canada. Presented from many aspects — administration, finance, metropolitan areas, and provincial-municipal relations. Presents proposals, and discussions, of various provincial reports on local and regional government. Includes an extensive classified bibliography.

Sayegh, Kamal S., ed.

Canadian housing: a reader. Waterloo, Ont: School of Urban and Regional Planning, Faculty of Environmental Studies, University of Waterloo, 1972. 254p.

A comprehensive anthology of 76 current articles on various facets of housing in Canada. The readings are grouped under 15 topics — the concept of home, the concept of ownership, housing, the role of government, economic issues in housing, housing market, physical aspects of housing, housing and environment, social area housing, housing the minorities, low-income housing, urban renewal and rehabilitation, and, a look ahead. This book is directed to undergraduate readers.

Science Council of Canada

Cities for tomorrow: some applications of science and technology to urban development. Science Council of Canada, report no. 14. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. 67p.*

Presents the views and recommendations of the Science Council regarding policies for the development of Canada's urban areas.

The report deals primarily with the need for long-range systematic suggestions for development of policies and institutions.

Urban Canada. Toronto: Copp Clark, 1968. 167p.

Refutes traditional rural images of Canada by drawing attention to the phenomenon of an "urban Canada" and factors accounting for the country's high degree of urbanization. Compares urban areas in terms of size, age, setting and ethnic background. Also discusses historical development of urban areas; economic development and specialization, and hence economic inter-relatedness; planning and administration; and patterns of land use, functional and demographic distribution within the city. Finally the authors evaluate changes in forces controlling urban structure and discuss possible effects of such forces — the cities of the future. Recommended for basic reading.

Slater, David W.

"The political economy of urban changes in Canada". Queen's Quarterly, vol. 67, no. 4, Winter 1961. pp. 586-604.

This essay, a forerunner of articles on urban Canada, is concerned with the questions of the appropriate roles of the state and of private economic arrangements in "city building." The author examines the broad mechanisms and institutions that have been used to deal with urban growth and change. He suggests that much study of the existing institutions and their works must be made and that alternative mechanisms for performing tasks should be considered.

Spelt, Jacob

Urban development in south-central Ontario. Carleton Library, no. 57. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1972. 296p.

First published in 1955, this study describes urban growth on the north shore of Lake Ontario from 1780-1951. Population shifts, road, rail and canal construction and the rise of Toronto are all investigated in depth by the author.

Spelt, Jacob and Donald Kerr

Toronto. Canadian cities series. Toronto: Collier-Macmillan, 1972. 183p.

This book examines the history of Toronto, the reasons for and patterns of growth, and projections for the future, based on what occurred in the past.

Stone, Leroy O.

Urban development in Canada: an introduction to the demographic aspects. Ottawa: Queen's Printer, 1967. 293p.

1961 Census Monograph prepared for the Census Division, Dominion Bureau of Statistics. Provides most useful statistics on urban growth, in some cases dating back to 1851 or 1871 Census.

Strick, J. C.

Canadian public finance. Toronto: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1973. 184p.

A book on government financial institutions and the practices and problems of government finance in Canada. Certain aspects discussed are the role of government and the rapidly growing public sector, intergovernmental fiscal relations and various socio-economic problems such as pollution, poverty and regional economic disparities.

Thibodeau, Jean-Claude

Implantation manufacturière dans la région de Montréal 1962-1967. Cahier du C.R.U.R. (Centre de recherches urbaines et régionales), no 1. Montréal, Presses de l'Université du Québec, 1971. 94p.

A study of the effects of the construction of Mirabel airport on the manufacturing industry in that area north of Montreal. Bibliography.

Wheeler, Michael, ed.

The right to housing. Montreal: Harvest House, 1969. 349p. Edited from the Background Papers and Proceedings of the first "Canadian Conference on Housing" held in Toronto in 1968 under the sponsorship of the (then) Canadian Welfare Council.

Winter, Eric

Urban landscapes. Urban Studies Series. Scarborough, Ont: Bellhaven House, 1969. 148p.

First in a series intended as a basis for urban study courses in high schools and colleges. The focus of the book is the landscape, and the ideas it presents are intended to generate hypotheses about local urban environments which can be tested by observations. The book is well illustrated and each chapter ends with a set of suggested investigations to pursue.

Wolforth, John and Roger Leigh

Urban prospects. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart, 1971.
171p.

An examination of the nature of Canadian cities attempting to arrive at an increased understanding of the reasons for the recent rapid growth of Canadian cities. The book also looks at the functions of particular cities, their internal form, and how people live in the urban environment.

2.2 Reference sources

Alberta. Task Force on Urbanization and the Future

Index of urban and regional studies, Province of Alberta, 1950-1973. Issue no. 1. Edmonton: 1973. 50p.

An inventory of urban and regional research relating to Alberta. The index is cross referenced by subject, author and location.

Black, A. and M. Powell

Municipal government and finance: an annotated bibliography. Ottawa: Policy and Planning Division, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1971. 230p. bil.

2.3 Of current interest

Clairmont, Donald H. and Dennis W. Magill

Africville relocation report. Halifax: Institute of Public Affairs, Dalhousie University, 1971. 396p.

A study, sponsored by the Nova Scotia Department of Public Welfare and the Department of National Health and Welfare, on the relocation of Africville in Halifax. Gives a comprehensive picture of the decision-making process, the major highlights and the mechanics of the Africville relocation.

Dennis, Michael and Susan Fish

Programs in search of a policy: low income housing in Canada. Toronto: Hakkert, 1972. 392p.

Commissioned to provide background material for revisions to the National Housing Act in 1972, this study is divided into four areas: economic, production and design: institutional-administrative and social aspects.

Fraser, Graham

Fighting back: urban renewal in Trefann Court. Toronto: Hakkert, 1972. 298p.

How the people of a five block area in Toronto managed to avoid being expropriated by city hall supported urban developers. A blueprint showing how small, well-organized groups of people can "fight city hall".

Granatstein, J. L.

Marlborough marathon: one street against a developer. Case Studies in Community Action. Toronto: Hakkert, and James Lewis & Samuel, 1971. 131p.

An account of how the residents of Marlborough Street in Toronto created a street organization in order to preserve their street against "Progress in the form of a massive new real estate development".

Lorimer, James

A citizen's guide to city politics. Toronto: James Lewis & Samuel, 1972. 224p.

The first comprehensive account of the building and land development industry in Canada. Lorimer explains the connection between the industry and city government and discusses city planning and transportation policies setting forth the viewpoint of citizen activists. Most attention is given to the cities of Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Lorimer, James

The real world of city politics. Toronto: James Lewis & Samuel, 1972. 176p.

This material was first published as newspaper articles in The Globe and Mail and describes six encounters between city hall and citizen groups in Toronto in 1969-1970.

Massey, Hector and Charles Godfrey

People or planes. Toronto: Copp Clark, 1972. 109p.

This account of the federal and Ontario provincial governments' decision to establish a second Toronto airport near the southern Ontario community of Pickering strongly supports the attempts of Pickering citizens to have the project cancelled.

Richardson, Boyce

The future of Canadian cities. Toronto: new press, 1972. 259p.

The author surveys the Canadian urban crisis, concentrating on Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. He investigates land costs, the housing market, major redevelopment schemes, transportation and recreational land. American models of uncontrolled growth are decried while praise is given to the urban planning experiments of Holland, Britain and Sweden.

Sewell, John

Up against city hall. Toronto: James Lewis & Samuel, 1972. 192p.

A behind-the-scenes account of the citizen's side of the dispute between planners, architects and developers on the one side and the citizen groups on the other. Mr. Sewell recounts his experience with urban renewal planning. He explains the sources of public dissatisfaction regarding current problems of land development in Toronto.

Stein, David Lewis

Toronto for sale: the destruction of a city. Toronto: new press, 1972. 141p.

The author believes that it is the private profit system that ruins Canadian cities and gives several case examples of how Toronto developers have destroyed good neighbourhoods in search of quick gain.

To act as a forum for the internal exchange, and the external political expression of municipal government points of view on a national basis in Canada; to act in general, as the unified voice of Canada's municipalities, but also where required, as a specific focus for regional, metropolitan, large or small urban, and rural representations by local government

To act as an information and advisory service centre for Canada's municipalities

To support the Canadian Association of Municipal Administrators (CAMA) in their efforts to improve availability of education and training courses for municipal management, and to assist them in coordinating such existing courses

To assume a research function to coordinate studies on municipal affairs

Activities

As pertaining to the above first objective, the preparation for, and the participation in: an annual CFMM conference; national tri-level conferences; presentations to federal-provincial conferences; presentations to the federal government; assistance to municipal associations when requested

As pertaining to the above second objective, the distribution, exchange and dissemination of federal and provincial legislation reports, municipal statistics, municipal research reports

As pertaining to the above third objective, the supply of office and production facilities, and the supply of grants

As pertaining to the above fourth objective, and subject to the availability of special funding for such purposes, research is undertaken to coordinate studies on municipal affairs, in cooperation with other federal or provincial departments, the preparation of reports and policy recommendations on such matters as public finance and revenue sharing, intergovernmental affairs, housing, transportation and municipal affairs in general

Areas of concern

Without limiting the intent of the above given objectives and activities, CFMM's interest lies in all areas affecting municipalities, such as finance and economics, social planning, transportation and communications, environmental protection, community development, cultural affairs, recreation and leisure

Resources

Membership fees; grants from the federal government and some provincial governments for specific projects

Publications

Objectives

To improve the quality of the environment in which people live, to which end the Association:

fosters public understanding of community, urban and regional planning; and encourages the active participation in planning by informed citizens; and cooperates with other groups on planning matters

Without limiting the general objective, the Association aims in particular:

to promote education in environmental planning in schools and universities and in programs of continuing education

to stimulate the development of new knowledge relating to the environment of human settlement through studies and research and the recording of experience to accumulate and disseminate information relevant to policies in environmental planning to cooperate with elected governments, public agencies and other bodies in applying planning concepts and practices to the development of the environment

to provide open forums through which government and the citizen can communicate policies, needs and views on planning matters to encourage the coordination and integration of public and private programs of planning and development

Activities

On-going programs in all parts of Canada, including national and provincial conferences and seminars; provincial, regional, and local conferences, seminars and meetings

National and provincial offices provide a 'community planning' and 'urban affairs' information service to all citizen groups and individuals, especially to students whether or not they are members of the Association

Areas of concern

Community planning and urban affairs generally. Specifically, programs are designed to assist citizens to identify the problems and issues in their communities and to provide alternative proposals — 'case studies' — for dealing with them

Objectives

To contribute to the exchange of information between governments in the area of housing, urban and regional development

Activities

The following services are available to the staff members of the federal, provincial and territorial governments

Document service: documents collected by the information service are classified and coded according to the Index, copies of which are distributed to the Committee's clientele

Bibliographic service: lists of reports, documents, papers etc. produced by government departments and agencies on specific subjects are prepared by the information service. These lists contain the following data for each document: title, author, contact or publisher, date of publication, area or region covered, and a brief annotation

Referral service: information about government projects and programs currently underway may be exchanged where constraints with respect to confidentiality do not limit availability.

Information card service: four to eight bilingual summaries of government projects and programs are distributed weekly to approximately 1,000 users in the federal, provincial and territorial governments. Summaries are also available to Canada's 4,600 municipalities.

Occasional reviews: preparation of at least four state of the art reviews per year. These reviews, of a technical nature, are based on data collection.

Areas of concern

The identification, collection and dissemination of information in urban and regional research, by means of frequent personal contact between the information service staff and the research and technical personnel in governments across Canada

The storage and immediate retrieval of such information, by means of a multiple-access, computerized master file.

Resources

Objectives

To promote an effective, well-balanced program of community and social services

To bring together individuals and representatives of organized groups to work toward improvement in the life of the community

To work with such community organizations, new and old, formal and informal, as the Social Planning Council may direct and to the extent so directed in order to assess the objectives, strengths and weaknesses of such organizations; to assist such organizations by providing services

To provide consultative and research services to social agencies, both voluntary and tax supported, to boards, commissions and departments of government, and to community organizations

To study the needs of the people of the community to determine how effectively and efficiently they are being met

To initiate and carry out research

To develop public awareness and understanding of the social needs and how the community, through various means, is caring for them

Activities

Task forces on particular social issues, such as non-profit housing, and certain aspects of income security

Community communications through workshops, town hall meetings, community television, etc. to provoke public discussion of community issues

Planning assistance and consultation to citizen groups

Establishment and support of coalitions to help integrate the programs of separate agencies or service units in a particular field, such as day care and services to the elderly

Areas of concern

Community review and research: review of the aging in Metropolitan Toronto; Metropolitan Toronto housing profiles; families in high rise apartments; standard budget for the elderly

Social development: work opportunities and work incentives; job creation and career development; non-profit housing

Resources

Grants from the federal and provincial governments; municipality of Metropolitan Toronto; United Community Fund; memberships; donations; various other grants; sale of publications

Publications

Executive Newsletter — monthly; sent to members

Various reports, e.g. Metropolitan Profile 1966 — periodic publication providing in graphic and tabular form, demographic data by census tracts and sub-areas of Metropolitan Toronto

Objectives

UDI is an independent non-profit organization working toward the principle that every Canadian has the right to a wholesome environment and adequate shelter. Its members, ranging from small organizations to the largest development companies, all share a common interest in achieving the best possible methods of carrying out land and property development and urban renewal

To work continuously through its policy of encouraging communications between its own members and any other bodies engaged in urban development

Activities

Working committee sessions for exchange of ideas and solving various problems that confront the industry.

Active chapters and liaison committees in many urban areas across the country which provide liaison with other groups and local governments

Recommendations on important topics affecting development

Regular workshops and seminars to provide members and guests with organized forums for the exchange of views and ideas

Speaking engagements in private industry, education and public meetings

Areas of concern

All areas related to urban development including residential, commercial, institutional and industrial

UDI's residential division includes members who are active in every form of rental and freehold, high and low density development

Land division — proper utilization of available land space — allowing for a balanced mix of urban needs including the community and its economic, sociologic and physiologic aspects

Upgrading standards of the industry and legislative framework of government

Resources

Membership fees and annual dues

Publications

Newsletters such as President's Report and UDI Views — available to members only

Briefs submitted to government bodies, e.g. Residential land development in Ontario — 1973

Special reports, e.g. Public land banking, real or illusionary benefits? — 1974

Library/Information Centre

Acknowledgments

The Ministry of State for Urban Affairs gratefully acknowledges the co-operation received from urban organizations, libraries, information centres and universities in the preparation of this directory.

The information in this directory was researched and compiled by Margaret Dunn, with the assistance of Ginette Forques-Chénier and Evangeline Campbell of the Ministry's Information Resource Service.

1 Introduction

Readers familiar with the first Directory of Canadian urban information sources, published in November 1974, will notice that substantial changes have been made in certain parts of this text, whereas other sections have been merely updated. To make this 1975 edition as readily useful and valuable as the 1974 edition entailed considerable expansion of some sections and repetition of others. These are explained in more detail as follows.

Urban Literature

The retrospective Canadian urban bibliography of the 1974 edition has not been repeated here. Instead, it was decided to list only literature published in the last two years. Neither list in "Reference Sources" nor in "Selected Readings" is intended to be comprehensive; rather, the aim has been to point out recent works of "general interest". All selections are by Canadians or have substantial Canadian content and should be readily available at local community or university libraries.

In a 1972 report, Government publishing in the Canadian provinces: a prescriptive study, A. Paul and Catherine A. Pross criticized the lack of ready access to government documents. The recent appearance of a Toronto-based microfiche subscription service has served to remedy this problem to some extent. Each month, ProFile from MicroMedia reproduces major publications of most provincial government departments and thirteen Canadian municipalities.

The quarterly Index to Current Urban Documents from Greenwood Press provides microfiche of publications of larger American cities and counties as well as those U.S. federal agencies concerned with urban affairs. A number of Canadian municipalities are participating in this venture as well as in ProFile.

The brief listing of "Audio-Visual Aids" following the literature review is intended only to highlight the variety of non-print materials available. A more complete guide is to be found in R. Charles Bryfogle's bibliography, The City in Print (1974).

Finally, readers are reminded of the useful and recently expanded mail-order book service offered by the Community Planning Association of Canada. The Bookshoppe, specializing in urban studies, stocks more than 700 commercially published titles, and will supply all Canadian urban titles in print and selected books available from foreign publishers within the subject areas.

Libraries, Archives and Information Centres

The substantial urban research collections in federal and provincial government libraries, as well as valuable municipal documentation maintained in archives and local information centres, are drawn to users' attention in this section. Federal government libraries appear first, followed by an alphabetical arrangement of provincial government libraries. Lastly in this section are municipal archives and information centres.

Urban Organizations

This section repeats, with updated material, details of professional associations, research councils, and special interest groups at the national level. Social planning councils and agencies at the local level have not been included. The one exception made is the listing of associations of municipalities whose activities are too often unrecognized, and whose existence, it is felt, should be drawn to the public's attention more frequently than on the occasion of a yearly conference. The descriptions of objectives were supplied by the institutions and organizations themselves in response to written requests and appear as such with only editorial changes.

Universities

Opportunities for education in urban and regional affairs at Canadian universities and community colleges provides a very extensive overview of a wide variety of courses with urban content of interest to a student at the post-secondary level. It was decided, therefore, to highlight only the programs and activities of research institutes and planning schools of Canadian universities.

Wherever possible, information on special library collections, such as the Urban Documentation Centre at McMaster University, has been included. Two other guides which should be consulted for details on university programs are Universities and Colleges of Canada, published annually by Statistics Canada in co-operation with the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada, and Guide to Graduate Education in Urban and Regional Planning, first edition 1974, from the Association of Collegiate Schools of

Use of English and French

Names and addresses of institutions have not been translated, but the descriptive material has been annotated in the language of this edition. Material also available in French is indicated by an asterisk, *. Material published in English and French under the same cover is indicated by the term "bilingual" at the end of the citation.

2 Urban Literature

2.1 Reference Sources: Bibliographies

Angers, Majëla

Liste de publications reliées aux 63 principales agglomérations du Québec. Québec: Ministère des Affaires municipales, 1975. n.p.

This listing is compiled from two previous bibliographies which, combined, provide a perspective from 1900 to 1974 of published material on the 63 largest urban areas of Québec. Items on Montréal and Québec are classed by subject; others are listed by year of publication.

Brown, Barbara E.

Canadian business and economics: a guide to sources of information. Ottawa: Canadian Library Association, 1976. xvii, 636 pp. Bilingual.

Entries are grouped by province and arranged by subject. Listings include reports for and by federal and provincial government departments, universities and other agencies. This guide is considerably expanded from an earlier CLA series issued in part form.

Bryfogle, R. Charles

The City In Print: A Bibliography. Agincourt, Ont.: General Learning Press, 1974. iv, 324 pp.

Detailed subject headings are used to classify and annotate works described as "generally available". Part Two is a guide to non-print materials. Appendices include addresses of publishers and distributors. Index is author/title.

Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research

Urban & Regional REFERENCES 1945-1969. Ottawa: 1970. 796 pp. Bilingual.

This remains the only comprehensive subject-arranged and annotated bibliography of published and unpublished Canadian urban material. Supplements published annually.

Council of Planning Librarians Exchange Bibliographies

This is an irregular series of bibliographies on a wide variety of topics. Though predominately American, the following titles have been selected in light of their Canadian content. All are available from the Council of Planning Librarians, Monticello, Ill., U.S.A.

Bolliger, Irene

Northern Development: People, Resources, Ecology and Transportation in the Yukon and Northwest Territories. A Bibliography of Government Publications with Selected Annotations. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 643. 1974.
13 pp.

Dakin, John and Pamela Manson-Smith

Toronto Urban Planning: a Selected Bibliography 1788-1970. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 670. 1974. 31 pp.

Dill, John and Pamela Macri

Current References Relating to Housing and Land Issues in Canada. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 842. 1975. 33 pp.

Peters, Elizabeth

The Central Business District of Canadian Cities: An Inter-Disciplinary Approach. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 625. 1974. 31 pp.

Peters, Elizabeth

The Toronto Waterfront: Planning and Development. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 624. 1974. 6 pp.

Cuddy, Mary Lou and James J. Scott, comps.

British Columbia in Books: An Annotated Bibliography. Vancouver: J.J. Douglas Ltd., 1974. 144 pp.

Entries arranged alphabetically. Separate sections on city planning, provincial publications and newspapers. All entries verified in print as of December 1973. Index is author/title and subject.

Grasham, W.E. and G. Julien, comps.

Canadian Public Administration Bibliography: Supplement 1.
Toronto: Institute of Public Administration of Canada, 1974.
122 pp. Bilingual.

The Supplement lists materials for the period May 1971 to December 1972. References are to books, journals, theses and government publications. Author index.

Hulchanski, John David

Citizen Participation In Planning: A Comprehensive Bibliography. Papers on Planning and Design, No. 2.
Toronto: Department of Urban and Regional Planning, University of Toronto, February 1974. 77 pp.

Entries arranged alphabetically; no annotations. Subject appendices provide guidance for the user.

Rodger, Evan

An Annotated Bibliography On Planning for Pedestrians. Joint Program in Transportation, Research Report No. 15.
Toronto: University of Toronto/York University, February 1974. 23 pp.

Sloane, D. Louise, Janette M. Roseneder and Marilyn J. Hernandez, eds.

Winnipeg: A Centennial Bibliography. Winnipeg:
Armstrong Publishers, 1974. xi, 140 pp.
Compiled from holdings in Winnipeg libraries, this is an extensive historical perspective of writings on the city. Entries are arranged alphabetically under fifteen subject areas. Author index.

2.3 Selected Readings

Artibise, Alan F.J.

Winnipeg: a social history of urban growth 1874-1914.

Montreal: McGill-Queen's University Press, 1975. xiv, 382
pp. Bibliography.

The author examines the actions of the city's commercially-minded élite, whose dedication to fostering the growth of the city resulted in a host of unforeseen social problems and facilities grossly inadequate to deal with these.

Benjamin, Jacques

Planification et politique au Québec. Montréal: Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 1974. 142 pp. Bibliography.

A critical examination of Québec's approach to planning, particularly in the fields of transport, housing, and social planning. Rather than follow the example of France, the author feels the province should entirely rethink its planning strategy.

Bergeron, Claude

L'avenir de la colline parlementaire. Québec: Éditions du Pélican, 1974. 150 pp. Bibliography.

The author sees the provincial government's office complexes being built in the shadows of old Québec as proving ultimately harmful to the economic and social fabric of the city.

Decentralization is, in her opinion, a more efficient and realistic way of providing services to the population, and one more in keeping with trends and practices of other countries.

Bernard, André, Jacques Leveillée and Guy Lord

Profile: Vancouver. The political and administrative structures of the metropolitan region of Vancouver. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1975. 123 pp. Bibliography.*

This is one of a series of ten monographs commissioned by the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs describing the systems of local government in the ten most populated Canadian metropolitan regions — Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Winnipeg, Ottawa-Hull, Toronto, Hamilton-Wentworth, Montréal, Québec, and Halifax-Dartmouth. Each Profile provides a brief historical introduction and proceeds to an elaboration of the political and administrative structures as they exist in each of these metropolitan areas. A discussion of urban development in the region, with particular reference to land use planning and urban transportation is found in Part II of each Profile. Tables, maps, and charts are used extensively throughout.

Bryfogle, R. Charles and Ralph R. Krueger, eds.

Urban problems. rev. ed. Toronto: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1975. Bibliography.

The value of the 1971 edition as a general introduction to the city and its structure has been retained in the revised edition. New chapters on land ownership and the problems of city centres have been added.

Cameron, David M.

“Urban policy”, in Issues in Canadian Public Policy, edited by G. Bruce Doern and V. Seymour Wilson. Toronto: Macmillan of Canada, 1974. 355 pp. Bibliography.

The editors have assembled a comprehensive collection of articles examining government policy formulation in areas such as language, culture, environment, communications, regional development, etc. “Urban policy” traces the development in the federal government’s assumption of a more active role in urban affairs. Hesitant to accept the Lithwick study recommendation for a national urban council, the government chose to introduce a “Ministry of State for Urban Affairs” charged with co-ordinative responsibilities for all federal government activities and programs of an urban character.

Collier, Robert W.

Contemporary Cathedrals: Large Scale Developments in Canadian Cities. Montreal: Harvest House, 1975. 201 pp.

The proliferation of enormous downtown office/shopping concourses which began in early 1960 and radically altered the face of Canadian cities is examined by the author. He investigates the circumstances and the web of interrelationships among developers, financiers, and elected officials in eleven major development projects.

Cutler, Maurice

"Foreign use and Canadian control of our land and resources." Canadian Geographical Journal, Vol. 90 (4, 5, 6), Vol. 91 (1 and 2), 1975. pp. 4-19, 18-33, 34-48, 19-41.

In this series of four articles, the author explores the extent of foreign investment in Canadian land and resources, and reviews the various measures enacted at the federal and provincial level to curtail this trend. The charts and tables of recent statistical data, and the comparative fact sheet on provincial land use regulations are particularly useful.

Dyos, H.J., ed.

Urban History Yearbook. Leicester, U.K.: Leicester University Press, 1974 - .

The reading appeal of this work is bound to increase now that Prof. Gilbert Stelter of the University of Guelph has joined the roster of overseas correspondents. Future issues of the Yearbook will include information on research (completed and under way) in Canada. The 1974 and 1975 editions contain résumés of conferences, colloquia, lengthy book reviews and a bibliography of newly published urban-content British titles.

Gabeline, Donna, Dale Lanken and Gordon Pape

Montreal at the crossroads. Montreal: Harvest House, 1975. 220 pp.

The authors contend that the current growth climate in Montréal is favouring high-rise downtown development and resulting in the destruction of an irreplaceable historic and architectural heritage. They underscore their point by citing a number of recent instances where valuable sites have been demolished; civic heritage committees, hampered by lack of enforcement powers, have been powerless to stop development. The final chapter is a series of recommendations for action at the three levels of government to curtail the trend.

Gutstein, Donald

Vancouver Ltd. Toronto: James Lorimer and Company Publishers, 1975. 192 pp.

The influence of individuals and the established corporations in shaping the growth and development of Vancouver is examined in a critical light.

Lord, Guy, André Tremblay and Marie-Odile Trépanier

Les communautés urbaines de Montréal et de Québec: premier bilan. Montréal: Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 1975. 126 pp.

In November 1974, the Centre de recherche en droit public held a forum focussing on the political-administrative structures and the financing of services for the urban communities of Montréal and Québec. Statements by the executive committee chairmen for both cities, as well as one by the mayor of Québec, are reproduced. Two overviews on the political-administrative structures and the growth problems of the metropolitan areas of these urban communities are included. A résumé of the question and answer session is appended.

Nader, George A.

Cities of Canada. Toronto: Macmillan of Canada, 1975. Volume I: Theoretical, Historical and Planning Perspectives. xi, 404 pp. Bibliography.

Part I is a framework for understanding the complexity of relationships and forces which have served to establish the contemporary Canadian city. Part II is a historical perspective on the evolution of urban Canada. Canadian urban problems are examined in Part III: urban planning, municipal finance, metropolitan government structures and the policies which have been formulated by governments to deal with these.

In Volume II, Profiles of Fifteen Metropolitan Centres, the above framework is applied to a more detailed examination of problems and solutions.

Pressman, Norman E.P.

Planning New Communities in Canada. Waterloo, Ont.: School of Urban and Regional Planning, University of Waterloo, 1974. i, 128 pp. Bibliography.

This is a general overview of the Canadian experience in establishing new communities. Examples of the types of new settlements: planned single-enterprise communities, satellite towns, suburban cities, etc. are discussed. The author probes the usefulness of the new community model in realizing government objectives and policies for growth management. Appendices include fact sheets on new communities in urban-centred regions, major single-enterprise communities in Canada, the New Towns Act of Alberta, and a bibliography on new towns in Canada.

Riffel, J.A.

Quality of life in resource towns. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1975. 107 pp.*

This is a report of a research study prepared for the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs. It is a general consideration of the problems resource towns face in creating a true quality of life for their residents. Each section ends with a list of suggested "innovations" for improving present conditions.

Rowat, Donald C.

"The problem of federal-urban relations in Canada."

Quarterly of Canadian Studies, Vol. 3 (4), 1975. pp. 214-24.

Increasingly, Canadian municipalities are finding themselves unable to meet current and new program obligations with their present inadequate financial resources. The author contends that the solution to some of the more immediate problems rests not in direct action with the municipalities, but in more revenues donated by the federal government to the provinces for distribution to the municipalities — a solution which permits the municipalities to be creative and the provincial role to remain strong.

Rowat, Donald C.

"The role of Canada's urban municipalities in governmental decision-making." Studies in Comparative Local Government, Vol. 8 (1) 1974. pp. 43-9.

The traditional constraints on city governments' decision-making powers and their ability to influence or change decisions made by other levels of government are examined. The author compares the role of Canadian cities in a federal system vis-à-vis others.

Rumilly, Robert

Histoire de Montréal. Montréal: Éditions Fides, 1970-74. 5 Vols.

The first two volumes relate the founding of the city. The period of growth, the establishment of the financial institutions, the problems of expansion and of the 1920s economic recession are treated in volumes 3 and 4. The administrations of Camillien Houde and Jean Drapeau, the effects of wartime, the population explosion, and the staging of Man and his World, are the subject of volume 5.

Rutherford, Paul, ed.

Saving the Canadian city: the first phase 1880-1920.

Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1974. xxiii, 359 pp.
Bibliography.

This anthology of early articles on urban reform in Canada is evidence of the increasing interest in Canadian social history. The readings are divided into four areas: regulation of municipal utilities, redemption of the urban community, the concept of town planning and the reform of municipal government.

Saywell, John T.

Housing Canadians: Essays in the History of Residential Construction in Canada. Discussion Paper No. 24. Ottawa: Economic Council of Canada, 1975. vii, 216 pp.

The author provides a historical perspective on the housing construction process particularly as evidenced in Toronto, Montréal, Winnipeg, and Vancouver; additionally, he traces events in the enunciation of a housing policy following World War I.

Schwilgin, F.A.

Town Planning Guidelines. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1973. 168 pp. Bibliography.*

A manual of the administrative and technical principles which the Department of Public Works has adopted in the execution of its role in urban areas.

Simmons, James W.

Patterns of residential movement in Metropolitan Toronto.

University of Toronto, Department of Geography, Research Publication, No. 13. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1974. viii, 138 pp. Bibliography.

An examination of intra-urban migration as undertaken by a wide variety of households in Metropolitan Toronto.

Simmons, James and Robert Simmons

Urban Canada. 2nd ed. rev. Toronto: Copp Clark Publishing, 1974. 188 pp.

This is basic reading for anyone interested in the extent of the urbanization phenomenon in Canada. In this second edition, the authors have revised the text, updated charts and tables to include 1971 Census data, and added a final chapter on issues and policy making.

Stelter, Gilbert

"The historian's approach to Canada's urban past." Histoire social — Social History, Vol. 7 (13), 1974. pp. 5-22.

The methodologies which Canadian historians have fashioned in their study of Canada's urban past are contrasted with those of their American counterparts. The author points out the long-standing neglect of some unique aspects in Canadian development, such as the influence of transportation and industrialization; only recently have scholars turned their attention to the realm of urban politics and government as an area of fruitful research.

Sunga, Preetom S. and Gerald A. Duc

MSUA and the Federal Government. Urban Paper A.75.1. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1975. 45 pp.*

The authors summarize the organizational process of government and the rationale for establishing a Ministry of State with a mandate of co-ordinating federal government programs and activities in urban affairs. The organization and functions of the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs are outlined. A final section discusses the decision-making process of government.

U.S. Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR)

A Look to the North: Canadian Regional Experience.

Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1974.
134 pp.

As part of its review of substate regionalism and the federal system, the ACIR published these seven case studies of the Canadian experience in local government reform. The work was done under the Institute of Local Government at Queen's University. The articles discuss reforms in four provinces: British Columbia, Ontario, Québec and New Brunswick; and three municipalities: Toronto, Vancouver, and Winnipeg. Some of the material is reprinted from authors' earlier works.

Urban History Review, No. 1, 1975.

"The Canadian City in the 19th Century." This issue presents a preview of position papers which formed the basis of a symposium at the Canadian Historical Association meeting in June 1975.

Articles on Halifax, Saint John, Québec, Montréal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver focus variously on the effects of economic growth, population, social organization and the physical environment.

Urban Prospects

The Urban Prospects series includes approximately 20 papers which will focus on long-term policy issues facing urban development in Canada. The series, being published by Macmillan of Canada for the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, is intended to provoke discussions and debate on important urban issues, and in particular, to provide insight into Canadian urban problems as the urban scene is brought into focus through the Habitat conference. At the time of going to press, six papers in the series had been published:

C.D. Burke. Parasites outnumber the hosts.

C.D. Burke and D.J. Ireland. An urban/economic development strategy for the Atlantic region.

Alice Coleman. Canadian settlement and environmental planning.

C.I. Jackson, ed. Canadian settlements — perspectives.

John Kettle. Hindsight on the future.

Rollie Thompson. People do it all the time.

Others will be published throughout the year to the end of 1976.

Ward, Barbara

Human settlements: Crisis and opportunity. Ottawa:

Information Canada, 1974. xi, 60 pp.*

In preparation for the forthcoming U.N. Conference on Human Settlements, the author presents her personal view of our global crisis.

Yeates, Maurice

Main Street: Windsor to Quebec City. Toronto: Macmillan of Canada, 1975. xiv, 413 pp. Bibliography.*

The future implications for shaping Canada's growth, when half the country's population is now concentrated in this Windsor to Quebec City axis, prompted the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs to commission this book. In his study, the author has provided a very detailed array of information (statistical and other) on this area. His chapters include discussion of the form of the axis, its growth, expansion and convergence, land use, housing, economic structure, interaction, channels of interaction, structure and finance, the axis in the year 2001, and summary and conclusions.

2.4 Audio-Visual Aids

Slide and film sets generally provide a valuable dimension to any oral presentation. Sale or rental arrangements can be made with minimum difficulty. Libraries have in recent years built up their collections of non-print materials. The Metropolitan Toronto Library Board publishes annually a directory of the 16 mm films available from the public libraries in Metropolitan Toronto; others publish listings of audio-visual aids as well.

The following is a brief sampling of some noteworthy productions. A highly commendable series from the National Film Board (NFB), Challenge for Change, includes urban titles such as Little Burgundy (1968), Encounter on urban environment (1971); and a transportation series: A bus for us (1972), Where do we go from here (1973) and Regina Telebus (1973). Two particularly excellent urban features are URBANOSE (1972) and URBA 2000 (1974). In the thirteen films which make up the URBANOSE package, the camera lens examines the problems created by Montréal's rapid growth, as well as similar crises facing European cities. URBA 2000 is a natural outgrowth of URBANOSE. In a series of ten hour-long films, director Michel Régnier presents examples of innovative and positive solutions to pressing city needs both in Canada and abroad. A few of these are the land banking experiment in Saskatoon, historic preservation in Québec and Warsaw, housing rehabilitation in Montréal, new towns in Great Britain, balanced urban growth in Dusseldorf, etc. The URBANOSE series is available in French only; five of the ten films in the URBA 2000 series have now been released in English.

Other recent NFB films with an urban focus are A Sense of Place, a one-hour 16 mm film dealing with the urgency of finding solutions to the problems of human settlements around the world. High River looks at how the residents of that Alberta community handled an urban growth situation created by the proximity of Calgary. Chairs for Lovers features architect Stanley King hosting a "design in", sensitizing people to the need for improvement and inventiveness in city design.

Details on rentals of any of the above-mentioned films can be obtained from any of the National Film Board offices across the country.

A useful slide series aimed at the secondary school level has recently been produced by the Canadian Association of Geographers. The Canadian Urban Profile Series includes 20 colour slides with English commentary on each of the following cities: Montréal, Hamilton, Halifax, Winnipeg, Toronto and Thunder Bay. Projected for release in the near future are Calgary, Sherbrooke, St. John's, and the Toronto Central Business District. The price for each set is $6.50 and orders should be placed through the Canadian Association of Geographers,

Burnside Hall, McGill University, P.O. Box 6070, Station "A", Montréal, P.Q. H3C 3G1.

The National Museum of Man, in co-operation with the National Film Board of Canada, has recently released Canada's Visual History series. Each unit comprises 30 slides (black and white and colour) and a bilingual text. Series I may be purchased as a complete set (20) or in individual units. It should be noted that the series was not designed as specifically urban, although the package includes a number of presentations with urban appeal, such as "Urban development in central Canada to 1850", and "The ranching frontier in Alberta 1874-1905". Inquiries should be addressed to Canada's Visual History Project, History Division, National Museum of Man, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0M8. The slide sets may be purchased from the exclusive NFB distributors across the country: in western Canada, from Scholar's Choice, 1150 Homer Street, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 2X8; in Ontario and the Atlantic provinces, from Visual Education Centre, 115 Berkeley Street, Toronto, Ontario M5A 2W8; and in Québec from La Société Secas Internationale, 400 est, rue Notre-Dame, Montréal (Québec) H2Y 1C8.

One of the continuing areas of study by Environment Canada's Lands Directorate is the problem of urban growth, its rate and characteristics, and the impact of the process of urbanization on other land uses. The Departmental Library endeavours to fill these information needs by collecting in the fields of land classification, land use planning, and urbanization. In addition, many of the environmental problems under study by the Department are relevant to urban planners and consequently research materials in such areas as solid waste management, waste water treatment, air pollution problems in urban areas, etc., are collected by the Library.

Objectives

- To identify gaps in knowledge in urban and regional affairs and encourage research in these areas.
- To facilitate the flow of research information.
- To bring together concerned organizations, administrators, elected officials and the academic community to identify issues, points of view and areas requiring further research.

Activities

Research: grant-in-aid program for Canadian non-profit organizations (universities, municipalities, associations) limited to continuing activities of projects begun before April 30, 1975 in the fields of urbanization, regional development and land management.

Regional membership, decision-maker and public forums related to the above.

Bibliographic service: annual publication of an indexed, classified and annotated bibliography listing completed research in urban and regional affairs in Canada.

Areas of Concern

Research and bibliography as above.

Identification of resource people concerned with specific research questions.

Co-ordination of state-of-the-art reviews.

Organization of conferences to discuss these concerns with people responsible for decision-making in urban affairs.

Resources

Membership subscriptions plus residues of past Ford Foundation and federal government funding.

Publications

Urban & Regional REFERENCES – annual bibliography – Bilingual.

Urban Forum – quarterly – Bilingual.

Occasional special reports, e.g. *Information for urban affairs in Canada, 1971.**

Offprints of published research funded by the Council.

Library/Information Centre

General urban collection including microfiche.

Open to the public; inter-library loan service.

Ottawa, Ontario
K1P 5J8

President
Dan Munroe
Librarian
Sheila Nause

(613) 237-5221

Objectives

- To act as a forum for the internal exchange, and the external political expression of municipal government points of view on a national basis in Canada; to act in general, as the unified voice of Canada's municipalities, but also where required, as a specific focus for regional, metropolitan, large or small urban, and rural representations by local government.
- To act as an information and advisory service centre for Canada's municipalities.
- To support the Canadian Association of Municipal Administrators (CAMA) in their efforts to improve availability of education and training courses for municipal management, and to assist them in co-ordinating such existing courses.
- To assume a research function to co-ordinate studies on municipal affairs.

Activities

- Pertaining to the first above-noted objective, preparation for and participation in: an annual CFMM conference; national tri-level conferences; presentations to federal-provincial conferences; presentations to the federal government; assistance to municipal associations when requested.
- Pertaining to the second objective, the distribution, exchange and dissemination of federal and provincial legislation reports, municipal statistics, and municipal research reports.
- Pertaining to the third objective, the supply of office and production facilities, and the supply of grants.
- Pertaining to the fourth objective, and subject to the availability of special funding for such purposes, research is undertaken to co-ordinate studies on municipal affairs, in co-operation with other federal or provincial departments, as well as the preparation of reports and policy recommendations on such matters as public finance and revenue sharing, intergovernmental affairs, housing, transportation and municipal affairs in general.

Areas of Concern

Without limiting the intent of the above-stated objectives and activities, CFMM's interest lies in all areas affecting municipalities, such as finance and economics, social planning, transportation and communications, environmental protection, community development, cultural affairs, recreation and leisure.

Resources

Membership fees; grants from the federal government and some provincial governments for specific projects.

Publications

Municipal report – monthly information bulletin.

Briefs and submissions presented to governments, e.g. CFMM

Briefs to the Government of Canada (1972, 1973, 1974) –
Bilingual.*

Proceedings of conferences and seminars, e.g. Urban Transportation Seminar, in Montebello, 1971.*

Special reports, study papers, e.g. A survey of urban transportation problems and priorities in Canadian municipalities, 1970.

Objectives

In recognition of the importance of developing and maintaining an urban and regional environment of the highest quality, of the vital role of comprehensive planning in this endeavour, and of the need for professional advice and counselling in such planning, the Institute directs itself to fulfil the following purposes toward improving and promoting the practice of planning:

- to show initiative in efforts at all levels to maintain and improve the quality of the environment of Canadian cities and regions;
- to advance and promote the values, use and methods of planning in the development of Canadian cities and regions;
- to promote and maintain high standards of professional planning practice and ethical behaviour in relation to interests of the general public, the profession and the client;
- to encourage communications and co-operation among all professions concerned with improving the quality of the urban and regional environment.

Activities

The Institute is a national federation of ten affiliate organizations representing five provinces and five regions in Canada.

(Affiliation with the Québec provincial organization, La Corporation des urbanistes du Québec, is now completed.) Most of the Institute's activities are organized on a regional basis. Annual national conference on selected urban and regional themes.

Both at the national and affiliate level, prepares proposals for and comments on legislation, programs and projects in the field of urban and regional planning which are advanced by all levels of government.

Objectives

To improve the quality of the environment in which people live, to which end the Association:

- fosters public understanding of community, urban and regional planning;
- encourages the active participation in planning by informed citizens; and
- co-operates with other groups on planning matters.

Without limiting the general objective, the Association aims, in particular:

- to promote education in environmental planning in schools and universities and in programs of continuing education;
- to stimulate the development of new knowledge relating to the environment of human settlement through studies and research and the recording of experience;
- to accumulate and disseminate information relevant to policies in environmental planning;
- to co-operate with elected governments, public agencies and other bodies in applying planning concepts and practices to the development of the environment;
- to provide open forums through which government and the citizen can communicate policies, needs and views on planning matters; and
- to encourage the co-ordination and integration of public and private programs of planning and development.

Activities

On-going programs in all parts of Canada, including national and provincial conferences and seminars; provincial, regional, and local conferences, seminars and meetings.

National and provincial offices provide a "community planning" and "urban affairs" information service to all citizen groups and individuals, especially to students whether or not they are members of the Association.

Areas of Concern

Community planning and urban affairs generally. Specifically, programs are designed to assist citizens in identifying the problems and issues in their communities and to provide alternative proposals — “case studies” — for dealing with them.

Resources

Main source of support is federal government funding; provincial government grants at the provincial level; sponsorship from business and industry; membership dues.

Publications

Community Planning Review — monthly — Bilingual.

Annual report — What's happening? — Bilingual.

Special reports, e.g. Battle for Land: Conference background material and Report, 1974; An evaluation of the Community Planning Association of Canada, 1974; Unicity Winnipeg 1972-1974: Preliminary study of formally-structured citizen participation; Canadian Housing Resource Catalogue, 1975.

Library/Information Centre

Objectives

- The preparation of an index of social science data holdings that exist in machine-readable form and are to be found in Canadian universities, as well as in non-profit research agencies and other bodies conducting social science research.
- The collection from federal and provincial government departments of a continuing description of their holdings and the performance of a liaison role between individual scholars and government departments.
- The provision of information in response to individual inquiries referring the inquirer to the source, but not attempting to provide the inquirer with the actual data.
- The provision of technical information necessary for the more effective use of the data.

Areas of Concern

Quantitative research in sociology and anthropology, economics, geography and demography, political science, psychology, history, law and criminology, urban studies, commerce, administration, management, marketing, industrial relations, communications, and related fields involving human variables.

Activities

The Data Clearing House is collecting information about quantitative machine-readable data in the social sciences. All types of quantitative or numerical data stressing human science variables are being covered. This includes socio-economic survey statistics, macro and micro data, as well as attitudinal measurement data. The emphasis is on data generated in the private sector (academic, corporate and other non-governmental) throughout Canada, which is in some way relevant to Canadian research needs. Governmental data originating at federal, provincial, and other levels in Canada are being covered selectively. Also included are data produced outside Canada which stress Canadian variables.

Objectives

To contribute to the exchange of information between governments in the areas of housing and urban and regional development.

Activities

The following services are available to the staff members of the federal, provincial and territorial governments.

Document service: documents collected by the information service are classified and coded according to an internal system described in the ICURR handbook, copies of which are distributed to the Committee's clientele.

Bibliographic service: lists of reports, documents, papers, etc. produced by government departments and agencies on specific subjects are prepared by the information service. These lists contain the following data for each document: title, author, contact or publisher, date of publication, area or region covered, and a brief annotation.

Referral service: information about government projects and programs currently under way may be exchanged where constraints with respect to confidentiality do not limit availability.

Information card service: four to eight bilingual summaries of government projects and programs are distributed weekly to approximately 1,300 users in the federal, provincial and territorial governments. Summaries are also available to Canada's 4,600 municipalities by subscription.

Occasional reviews: preparation of state-of-the-art reviews. These reviews, of a technical nature, are based on data collection. Mini-reviews on topics of current interest. Informal seminars.

Areas of Concern

The identification, collection and dissemination of information relating to Canadian government activities in urban and regional research, by means of frequent personal contact between the information service staff and the research and technical personnel in governments across Canada.

The storage and immediate retrieval of such information, by means of a multiple-access, computerized master file.

Resources

The operating expenses are shared according to a formula under which the federal government contributes 50 percent, and the provinces and territories share the remainder.

Publications

Calendar — chronological list of meetings and conferences related to urban and regional research activities; published three times a year — Bilingual.

Card Indexes — semi-annual lists of the titles of the information cards arranged by their subject code — Bilingual.

Acknowledgments

The Ministry of State for Urban Affairs gratefully acknowledges the co-operation received from urban organizations, libraries, information centres and universities in the preparation of this directory.

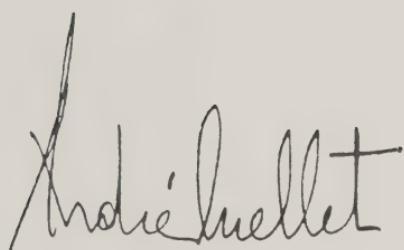

Margaret Dunn carried out the research and compilation of the information. The support of Molly Hirsch, Head of the Ministry's Information Resource Service, and of her staff is greatly appreciated.

Foreword

In our fast-moving world, a wealth of information exists on a wide variety of subjects. However, very often people have great difficulty sorting out what material is available on a given area of concern and where it can be found in a quick and efficient manner.

To assist in this task, my Ministry has compiled this directory to provide governmental and non-governmental urban information sources. I hope that both special interest audiences and the general public will benefit greatly from this up-to-date listing of urban sources.

1 Introduction

This edition of the Directory of Canadian Urban Information Sources continues the format and reporting of the 1974 and 1975 editions. It is anticipated that in future the Directory will appear biennially.

Urban Literature

The material in this section is divided into five parts: bibliographies; suggested basic Canadian readings pre-dating 1975; current readings published between 1975 and 1977; Canadian urban journals and newsletters; and audio-visual presentations. In light of the considerable amount of urban documentation distributed for the UN Conference on Human Settlements, a number of items which can be obtained free of charge have been included.

Periodical articles have been omitted from the urban literature section. The Canadian Periodical Index has recently expanded its coverage of Canadian journals and several other commercial indexes are picking up Canadian content. There are as well a number of computer data base operations which provide a current awareness and retrospective search capability in a broad range of social science subjects. To date there is no uniquely Canadian data base but more popular Canadian journals are indexed by the firms providing these services. Anyone wishing further information should inquire of the Selective Dissemination of Information (SDI) Division, National Library of Canada, 395 Wellington Street, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0N4.

Readers will be interested in the recent appearance of Urban Canada, a Current Index to Canadian Publications in the Field of Urban and Regional Planning and Development. This service from MicroMedia picks up from the Urban & Regional REFERENCES of the Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research. The Urban Canada index includes trade publications, conference papers, briefs, consultants' reports, institutional publications, position papers, unpublished government reports, and government publications of federal, provincial and municipal levels. Citations are under main entry, subject section and title section. A number of specialized Canadian periodicals and newsletters, not indexed elsewhere, are being scanned from 1977 onwards and articles indexed under the subject entries of Urban Canada. The Urban Canada index is fully bilingual. A microfiche service is provided for certain of the monographs where copyright clearance has been granted. The ProFile and Publicat indexes and microfiche service complement the Urban Canada index.

The audio-visual listings are as complete as possible at the time of printing. Particular attention has been given to listing films made for Habitat which can be obtained within Canada on a loan basis.

Libraries, Archives and Information Centres

This section is not intended to be an exhaustive listing of all libraries in Canada with particularly extensive urban collections. University libraries generally have good documentation in the urban affairs field, but it is impossible in this directory to detail the extent of all of these. In the "Universities" section, reading rooms or documentation centres attached to research institutes or planning schools have been indicated whenever known.

Several of the libraries chose not to expand the description of their holdings from the previous listing. Provincial legislative libraries and the Library of Parliament are particularly good sources for provincial documents, and the National Library of Canada is legal deposit for all federal and provincial materials as well as all other commercially published literature in Canada. Researchers are cautioned to verify in advance any restrictions on access or ready availability to these collections.

Historians and researchers interested in Canada's urban past will have noted descriptions of municipal archives appearing from time to time in Urban History

Review. The Urban History Committee of the Canadian Historical Association is interested in ensuring the preservation of documents pertaining to the settlement and development of Canadian cities and towns. Records management programs now underway in certain municipalities should provide valuable documentation for scholars.

Details concerning municipal archives, information centres and other urban specialty collections are welcomed for inclusion in future editions of this directory.

Urban Organizations

The professional associations, research councils and special interest groups were asked to review and update the descriptions of objectives and activities. Generally, few changes were noted, and the information appears as supplied with only minor editorial corrections.

Universities

Letters were sent to planning schools, urban research institutes, faculties of architecture and departments of geography of the larger Canadian universities. Responses varied, and accordingly some descriptions are much more complete than others. Information on admission requirements to professional schools is compiled annually in Universities and Colleges of Canada from the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada published in co-operation with Statistics Canada. Other useful materials on degree recognition, professional accreditation, etc. are available from the Canadian Association of Geographers, Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, Canadian Institute of Planners, the Association of Canadian Faculties of Environmental Studies, and the Association of Planning Programs at Canadian Universities.

Use of English and French

Names of institutions officially bilingual are used in the separate English and French editions. Otherwise, the name and address has not been translated but the descriptive material is annotated in the other language. Material published in English and French under the same cover is indicated by the term “bilingual” at the end of the citation. Material published separately in English and French is indicated by an asterisk*.

2 Urban Literature

2.1 Bibliographies

Alberta. Department of Municipal Affairs

Index of Urban and Regional Studies, Province of Alberta. Edmonton, 1973—.

The Task Force on Urbanization and the Future assembled documentation on research projects within the province. This work was subsequently picked up by the Special Project and Policy Research Branch and is now issued from the Alberta Municipal Affairs Library. Subject classification and title index.

Angers, Majëla

Liste de publications reliées aux 63 principales agglomérations du Québec. Québec: Ministère des Affaires municipales, 1975. n.p.

This listing is compiled from two previous bibliographies which, combined, provide a perspective from 1900 to 1974 of published material on the 63 largest urban areas of Quebec. Entries for Montreal and Quebec are arranged by subject while other entries are listed according to year of publication.

Artibise, Alan F. J., ed.

Communique: Canadian Studies. Vol. 3 (3) 1977.
Urban Studies Issue. 130 pp.

This is a very extensive Canadian urban studies bibliography arranged under subject headings such as government and politics, urban society, planning and architecture, regions (provinces and cities), and methodological and bibliographic. Entries are not annotated but many historical items have been included. The editor has added a section with descriptions of Canadian urban newsletters and journals, audio-visual aids, documentation and archival centres, and a few non-Canadian resources.

Black, A. and M. Powell

Municipal Government and Finance: An Annotated Bibliography. Ottawa: Policy and Planning Division, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1971. 230 pp. Bilingual.

The bibliography contains entirely Canadian material written since 1968 and is arranged by subject with an author index. Subjects include revenue sources, expenditures, intergovernmental relations, decision-making, local government reviews, statistics, metro and regional government, structures and administrative organizations.

Bryfogle, R. Charles

The City in Print: A Bibliography. Agincourt, Ont.: General Learning Press, 1974. 324 pp.

The author has classified and annotated over 1,500 urban writings described as "generally available". Part Two is a guide to non-print materials. Addresses of publishers and distributors are provided in appendices. Index is author/title. Two supplements have been produced. Orders for the original volume and supplements should be directed to: R. Charles Bryfogle, Information Centre on Urbanization, P.O. Box 3985, Tucson, Arizona 85717, U.S.A.

Canadian Council on Urban and Regional Research

Urban & Regional REFERENCES 1945-1969. Ottawa: 1970. 796 pp. Annual supplements 1970, 1971, 1972, 1973, 1974, 1975-1976. Bilingual.

This remains the pioneer work in providing a comprehensive and annotated subject entry bibliography of published and unpublished Canadian urban materials. Author and geographic index.

Cardinal, Michel

Urbanisme et logement: bibliographie. Vol. 1, no. 1. Montréal: Conseil de développement social du Montréal métropolitain, 1972. 176 pp.

An indexed and annotated bibliography on housing and urban affairs.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Professional Standards and Services Group

Mobile Homes Bibliography. June 1975. 13 pp.

Bilingual.

References are broken down into subject sections of books, reports and monographs; by-laws, codes, development guides and regulations; periodicals and professional journals.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Professional Standards and Services Group

A Selected Bibliography of Recent User Studies of Housing in Canada. Compiled by Linden Holmen. January 1976. 11 pp. Bilingual.

Entries of major documents and reports; most refer to studies based on empirical data. Periodical articles have not been included.

Council of Planning Librarians Exchange Bibliographies

Librarians and information specialists have begun contributing more Canadian content bibliographies to this exchange. Copies are priced individually or standing orders can be requested from the Council in Monticello, Illinois, U.S.A. The following recent titles have been selected for their Canadian content:

Swanick, Eric L.

The Canadian Energy Crisis: First Supplementary Bibliography. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 1188. 1976. 12 pp.

Canadian Immigration Studies in the Late 1960s and in the 1970s: An Introductory Bibliography. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 1179. 1976. 14 pp.

Land Use in Canada During the Seventies: An Introductory Bibliography. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 1180. 1976. 14 pp.

Mobile Homes in Canada: An Introductory Bibliography. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 1074. 1976. 5 pp.

Velikov, Velitchko

Provincial and Federal Use and Land Ownership Policies and Their Potential Impact on Political, Social and Economic Conditions in Canada. CPL Exchange Bibliography No. 993. 1976. 22 pp.

Whitney, Joan

Habitat Bibliography: A Selected Bibliography of Canadian References on Human Settlements. CPL Exchange Bibliography Nos. 1137 and 1138. 1976. 98 pp.

Grasham, W. E. and G. Julien, comps.

Canadian Public Administration Bibliography. Toronto: Institute of Public Administration of Canada, 1972. 261 pp. Bilingual. Supplement I, 1974. 122 pp. Bilingual. Supplement II, 1976. 83 pp. Bilingual.

Books, journal articles, theses and government publications relevant to the study of Canadian public administration are arranged by subject. Author index.

Manitoba. Department of Urban Affairs

Urban Research and Information Catalogue. 1973 —. Looseleaf.

This is a regularly updated listing of research projects on urban Manitoba, being conducted in city and provincial government departments, universities and non-government, urban oriented associations. Entries are annotated, and contact name provided.

Petherick, Linda, ed.

Urban Canada, a Current Index to Canadian Publications in the Field of Urban and Regional Planning and Development. Toronto: MicroMedia Ltd. Volume I, No. 1, 1977 —. Bilingual.

This Urban Canada Index picks up on the previous work of Urban & Regional REFERENCES. It includes trade publications, conference papers, institutional publications, consultants' reports, serials and newsletters, and will appear quarterly with an annual cumulation. The service began with monographs published in 1976 and serials issued from January 1977. The format is main entry with a subject section and title section. There is a backup service with microfiche copies of documents when copyright clearance has been granted. The ProFile (provincial government publications microfiche) and Publicat (federal government publications microfiche) complement the Urban Canada service.

Stinson, Arthur, ed.

Citizen Action: An Annotated Bibliography of Canadian Case Studies. Ottawa: Community Planning Press, June 1975, reprinted January 1977. 71 pp.

This bibliography is divided into six subject areas with annotations on all items ranging from books and periodical articles to mimeo sheets. A geographical index of cases and index of major themes is provided. A brief description of "how to write a case study" has also been included.

2.2 Basic Readings

The book titles listed below are prior to 1975. Though material in some cases may now be somewhat dated, there is still value in the overviews and analyses of the Canadian urban scene for anyone wishing a general, as opposed to a very technical, orientation.

Axworthy, Lloyd and James M. Gillies

The City: Canada's Prospects, Canada's Problems.
Toronto: Butterworth, 1973. 256 pp.

A book of readings by international and Canadian experts dealing with urbanization, urban space and urban problems.

Benjamin, Jacques

Planification et politique au Québec. Montréal: Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 1974. 142 pp.
Bibliography.

This is a critical examination of the province's approach to planning, particularly in the areas of transport, housing and social policy.

Draper, James A., ed.

Citizen Participation: Canada: A Book of Readings.
Toronto: New Press, 1971. 464 pp.

A collection of essays on such aspects as ideology, change and intervention, the neighbourhood concept, application and analysis, and case studies.

Jackson, John N.

The Canadian City: Space, Form, Quality. Toronto:
McGraw-Hill Ryerson Ltd., 1973. 237 pp.

The presentation is designed to promote an understanding of the Canadian post-1950 urban phenomenon, with examples drawn from the Niagara Peninsula and Toronto region. Situations are examined under: historical setting, physical condition, land use, form and development of the townscape, urban transportation, city functions, central business district, rural-urban fringe, and the future of the Canadian city.

Lithwick, N. H.

Urban Canada: Problems and Prospects. Ottawa: Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1970. 236 pp.*

This survey of trends and projections in Canadian urban development was undertaken to assist the federal government "to determine what, if any, role it should play in urban affairs and the likely consequences of such a role."

Six research monographs were published as supporting documentation:

- 1) *Urban Poverty,** by N. H. Lithwick; 2) *Housing in Canada: Market Structure and Policy Performance,** by L. B. Smith; 3) *The Urban Transport Problem in Canada 1970-2000,** by D. J. Reynolds; 4) *The Urban Public Economy,** by W. I. Gillespie; 5) *The Urban Future,** by A. Goracz, I. Lithwick, and L. O. Stone; and 6) *A Survey of Alternative Urban Policies,** by L. D. Feldman & Associates.

Lithwick, N. H. and Gilles Paquet, eds.

Urban Studies: A Canadian Perspective. Toronto: Methuen, 1968. 290 pp.

A collection of papers on various aspects of urbanization in Canada — sociological, urban renewal, administration, economics, etc.

Lorimer, James

A Citizen's Guide to City Politics. Toronto: James Lewis & Samuel, 1972. 224 pp.

The author explains the connections between the building and land development industries and city governments in Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Citizen activism for input into city planning and transportation policy formulation is discussed.

Plunkett, Thomas

Urban Canada and its Government: A Study of Municipal Organization. Toronto: Macmillan, 1968. 178 pp.

The principal forms of city government in Canada are outlined, with appendices describing the organization in seven Canadian cities. Some of the material is no longer current as a result of restructurings in a number of municipalities.

Richardson, Boyce

The Future of Canadian Cities. Toronto: New Press, 1972. 259 pp.

The author's investigation of the Canadian urban crisis touches on land costs, the housing market, major redevelopment schemes, transportation, and recreational areas. He concentrates on situations in Vancouver, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal.

Science Council of Canada

Cities for Tomorrow: Some Applications of Science and Technology to Urban Development. Report No. 14. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1971. 67 pp.*

This study's recommendations concentrate on the need for long-range planning in developing policies and institutions to cope with problems of an increasingly urbanized Canada.

Simmons, James and Robert Simmons

Urban Canada. 2nd ed. rev. Toronto: Copp Clark Publishing, 1974. 188 pp.

Refutes the traditional view of a rural Canada by drawing attention to the historical development of urban areas, economic interrelationships, planning and administration, patterns of land use, and functional and demographic distribution within the city. The final chapter highlights issues and policy making.

Winter, Eric

Urban Landscapes. Urban Studies Series.
Scarborough: Bellhaven House, 1969. 148 pp.
Ideas on the urban environment drawing on the methods rather than the content of the social science disciplines. Useful for classroom situations.

Urban Prospects. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart,
1971. 171 pp.
An examination of the functions, and internal form of cities, and the human adaptation to the urban environment.

2.3 Current Interest

Andrew, Caroline, André Blais and Rachel DesRosiers

Les élites politiques, les bas-salariés et la politique du logement à Hull. Ottawa: Éditions de l'Université d'Ottawa, 1976. 272 pp.
The authors examine the program of public housing construction in Hull. They point out the importance of public housing to urban renewal, and observe that perceptions of the élite can be influenced via communication of information from the public. They note the impact of "external" information which connects the local élite to those in other Quebec municipalities and in the neighbouring provinces.

Andrews, William A., ed.

A Guide to Urban Studies. Contours: Studies of the Environment. Scarborough: Prentice-Hall, 1976.
293 pp.
Discussion of the urban ecosystem, growth of urban communities, urban landscape, alternatives for the urban environment: benefits and costs. Suggests field and laboratory studies, research topics and case studies. Recommended readings are included with each section.

Bourne, L. S.

Urban Systems: Strategies for Regulation, a Comparison of Politics in Britain, Sweden, Australia and Canada. Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1975. 264 pp.
Bibliographic references.

The author uses the concept of the urban system to organize and evaluate policy developments and to identify needs and priorities in future research and policy analysis.

Bramwell, Robert D.

Towns and Cities. Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow.
Gage Urban Studies Series. Toronto: Gage
Educational Publishing, 1977. 96 pp.

Fourth title in this series designed for senior school level use. The discussion is general, but Canadian examples are used extensively throughout.

Bryfogle, R. Charles and Ralph R. Krueger, eds.

Urban Problems. rev. ed. Toronto: Holt Rinehart and Winston of Canada Ltd., 1975. 390 pp. Bibliography.
A collection of essays on subjects such as urban sprawl, transportation, housing and conservation, land ownership, and the problems of city centres. In the introduction to each chapter, the editors comment on the most significant writings mentioned therein. This text is particularly useful in classroom study.

Canada. Ministry of State for Urban Affairs

Urban Indicators: Quality of Life Comparisons for Canadian Cities. Ottawa: Information Canada, 1976.
86 pp.*

This is a graphic presentation of quality of life indicators tabulated for the 22 CMAs, as extrapolated from Statistics Canada data.

Canadian Council on Social Development

A Review of Canadian Social Housing Policy. Ottawa: the Council, 1977. 171 pp.

The study reviews deficiencies in existing housing legislation and questions the responsibility and administrative structures as presently constituted. The researchers were concerned with the characteristics of individuals who benefitted or did not benefit from activities of federal and provincial housing agencies, and the adequacy of both economic and social aspects of government housing programs in meeting the total housing needs of Canadians. The four major program areas reviewed are public housing, community-sponsored housing, assisted home ownership and residential rehabilitation.

Canadian Habitat Secretariat

Human Settlements in Canada. Ottawa: Canadian Habitat Secretariat, 1976. 101 pp.*

A factual account of human settlements in Canada: shelter, infrastructure, services, land, local government, community, settled regions, national scale and the future.

Canadian Habitat Secretariat

Where Are We Headed: A Discussion Paper on Human Settlements in Canada. Ottawa: Canadian Habitat Secretariat, May 1976. 50 pp.*

The report addresses the conflict between the aspirations of many Canadians and the realities of resource depletion, regional disparities and fiscal restraint.

Canadian National Committee for Habitat

Habitat and Canadians. Ottawa, January 1976. 56 pp.*

The report is a synopsis of views presented to the committee in its cross-country hearings and includes recommendations for action.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Program and Market Requirements Division

1974 Survey of Housing Units: Background Information and Statistical Rates and Cross-tabulation of Dwelling Units and Households. Ottawa: Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1976. NHA publication 5146, 24 volumes. Bilingual.

The survey was carried out in the fall of 1974 in 23 large urban centres across Canada. It was designed to relate dwelling unit characteristics and occupant characteristics by individual household, to detail why householders move to different areas, and to provide data relating demographic and economic variables more frequently and in greater detail than the decennial census.

Clibbon, Peter Brooke, et al.

Structure and Dynamic of Land Use. Montréal: Les Presses de l'Université de Montréal, 1975. 369 pp. Bibliography.

This study was prepared for a project on the ecology of the area surrounding the Montreal international airport. Part I looks at the evolution and present patterns of land uses; Part II examines aspects of the rural economy as revealed by the special agricultural census of 1970.

The Environment of Human Settlements: Human Well-being in Cities. Proceedings of the conference held in Brussels, Belgium, April 1976. Editor P. Laconte. Don Mills: Pergamon Press, 1976. 2 vols.

This was a conference commissioned of the World Environment and Resources Council by the Belgian government. The technical scope covers four main headings: modern technology for cities, decision-making for human well-being in cities, urban and land use planning, and design as a component in urban policy.

Falkner, Ann

Without Our Past? A Handbook for the Preservation of Canada's Architectural Heritage. Toronto: University of Toronto Press in association with the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs and Publishing Centre, Supply and Services, 1977. 242 pp. Bibliography.

Written to remind Canadians of their architectural heritage and its frequent disappearance in the face of urban development, this handbook also provides guidance in assessment procedures and evaluation of buildings. Appendix lists government departments, agencies and programs related to heritage conservation.

Feldman, Lionel D. and Michael D'Arcy Goldrick, eds.

Politics and Government of Urban Canada: Selected Readings. 3rd ed. rev. Toronto: Methuen, 1976. 448 pp.

Eleven articles have been reproduced from the first 1969 edition. New additions are designed to illustrate current trends and policy formulations in city and regional government settings. Readings are categorized under: theory, urban setting and influence, cities in an intergovernmental setting, structure, and urban and regional reform.

Gertler, Leonard O.

Urban Issues: Making Man's Environment. VNR Urban Planning Series. Toronto: Van Nostrand Reinhold Ltd., 1976. 124 pp.

A handy compendium of issues useful in classroom study. Subject areas include overview, transportation, land, new communities, and regional planning.

Changing Canadian Cities: The Next Twenty-five Years. Toronto: McClelland and Stewart in association with Ministry of State for Urban Affairs and Publishing Centre, Supply and Services, 1977.

474 pp.

The authors address the central question of the increasing concentration of the Canadian population in a few large cities. They describe the forces triggering national and regional growth. A section on the local urban environment includes discussion of urban fringe, inner city neighbourhoods, and resource communities, and is illustrated by case studies of eight distinctively different Canadian cities. The final section is an "imagined urban future" set out together with policy alternatives.

Harrison, Philip

What's Urban Geography? Gage Urban Studies Series. Agincourt: Gage Educational Publishing, 1976. 32 pp.

This book introduces students to the vocabulary of urban geography, explains the varieties of urban functions, and examines the main theories of urban growth.

Lord, Guy, André Tremblay and Marie-Odile Trépanier

In November 1974, the Centre de recherche en droit public held a forum focussing on the political-administrative structures and the financing of services for the urban communities of Montreal and Quebec. Statements by the executive committee chairmen for both cities, as well as one by the mayor of Quebec, are reproduced. Two overviews on the political-administrative structures and the growth problems of the metropolitan areas of these urban communities are included. A résumé of the question and answer session is appended.

Lorimer, James and Evelyn Ross, eds.

The City Book: The Planning and Politics of Canada's Cities. Toronto: James Lorimer and Company, Publishers, 1976. 223 pp. Bibliography.

This casebook on Canadian urban planning issues contains articles, all of which appeared previously in City Magazine. They are presented under: land, city politics, urban experts, case studies of public and private development, and urban policies. A bibliography of basic readings has been added.

Lorimer, James and Evelyn Ross, eds.

The Second City Book: Studies of Urban and Suburban Canada. Toronto: James Lorimer and Company, Publishers, 1977. 180 pp.

This sequel to The City Book draws on articles which appeared in City Magazine, though some have been updated from the original. Subject divisions are: land and suburbs, demolition, developers and city politics, planners and bureaucrats.

2.5 Audio-Visual Sources

Films listed in this section were considered to be of benefit to educators looking for audio-visual presentations suitable for geography, social studies or human environment classroom teaching. This list does not purport to be an exhaustive catalogue of films and slide shows. Many provincial departments of education publish media catalogues, as do larger library systems. Anyone interested in obtaining loan copies of films and slide tapes produced by the member states of the United Nations for the June 1976 UN Conference on Human Settlements should contact: United Nations Audio-Visual Centre, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, B.C. V6T 1W5.

Each film described below carries a notation of its locational availability. Generally films are available from NFB and CMHC regional offices, or from the Information and Communications Centre (ICOM) at CMHC's head office in Ottawa. Readers will find all relevant addresses listed at the end of this section.

Inner City 17 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French, 1976. The film portrays the four major processes of urban change taking place in Canada's inner city areas — massive redevelopment, stability, revitalization and decline. Available from NFB.

High River 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English, 1976. This film shows how the people of High River, Alberta, maintained their individuality in spite of the proximity of Calgary and how, on their own initiative, they handled urban growth. Available from ICOM.

The Big Ditch 11 min., colour, one-projector slide-tape, English, 1975. This presentation outlines options for the redevelopment of part of the now-unused Welland Canal. The urban sensitivity of the proposals is stressed. Available from ICOM.

The Liveable Region Plan 7 min., colour, one-projector slide-tape, English, 1975. This presentation shows the Greater Vancouver Regional District's grass-roots approach to metropolitan planning. Available from ICOM.

Reservoir 9 min., colour, 16 mm film, English. A film on the importance of water use and conservation, and deals with a prefabricated low-cost Canadian designed reservoir that is suitable for small communities. Available from NFB.

Saint John Design: Part I 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English, 1974. A people-oriented view of the Saint John approach to urban improvement. This is the first of two films on this New Brunswick city. The film traces the renovation of the city core from the initial stages of debate and planning by citizens and professionals and depicts the public participation process through personal interviews and controversial planning meetings. Available from ICOM.

Inner City-Inter City 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, video-cassette, English and French, 1974. Shows a cross-section of Canadian projects in which the Ministry is involved (i.e., the impact of rapid development on city inhabitants, revitalization of city cores, building restoration, land uses, port relocation and problems of transportation and housing). Available from NFB.

The Coldspring Project 28 min., colour, 16 mm film, English, 1974. The city of Baltimore, Maryland, brought new life and vitality to a large segment within its city limits through an imaginative development plan. The film records citizens' meetings where problems such as how to preserve a wildlife sanctuary adjacent to the 300-acre housing development area are discussed. Available from NFB.

The Innocent Door 30 min., colour, 16 mm film, English, 1974. An unusual view of the old city of Jerusalem — as it is, with traffic congestion, over-crowding and inadequate housing, and as it will appear, after planned redevelopment of certain sectors. Available from NFB.

Chairs for Lovers 28 min., colour, 16 mm film, English, 1973. Vancouver architect Stanley Kind demonstrates his method of involving students and the public in urban design by having "draw-ins/design-ins". The sketches are refined in a manner which can serve as a guide for city planners. Available from NFB.

Rail Lands and Urban Improvements 9 min., colour, one and two projector slide-tape, English, 1974. A sort of "design catalogue" of urban improvements, this sync-sound presentation was designed to show municipal politicians and planners how they could make the Railway Relocation Act work for them. Available from ICOM.

LaSalle Academy 12 min., colour, 16 mm film, bilingual, 1976. Music and footage show how the Ministry's new home, LaSalle Academy, has been inhabited over the past century, and renovated to preserve the heritage character of the building. Available from ICOM.

City Port 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French, 1974. Designed primarily for port managerial audiences, the highly visual content of this film will be of interest to anyone concerned with urban improvement. It outlines problems and prospects resulting from changes in port technology and the opening of harbourfronts to the people of Canada. Available from ICOM.

High Hopes for Low Costs 8 min., colour, two projector, English, 1976. This presentation, prepared for OECD in Paris for Habitat '76, deals with low cost improvements to the urban environment. Available from ICOM.

MSUA Films Produced for Habitat Conference on Human Settlements, 1976.

There is Still Time 26 min., colour, 16 mm, English and French, 1976 (Barbara Ward in Quebec City). This film illustrates the charm of living in a still largely unspoiled city, and at the same time, the threats carried by pollution, land speculation and unplanned growth. Available from NFB.

A Sense of Place 1 hr., colour, 16 mm, English and French. This film deals with the urgency of finding solutions to the problems of human settlements around the world. Available from NFB and ICOM.

Management of Urban Growth and Land Use 21 min., colour, 16 mm, English and French. This film explains how management plans such as regional economic development programs, legislative controls of land use and public land ownership in both urban and rural areas can help solve our ever-increasing land use problems. Available from UNAVIC.

Design Innovations in Canadian Settlements 17 min., colour, 16 mm, English and French (slides on film). This film shows how modern human settlements design can best use valuable land and energy throughout the various regions of Canada. Available from UNAVIC.

What on Earth Are We Doing 14 min., colour, 16 mm, English. This film points out the many problems of urbanization facing Canadian human settlements today. Available from ICOM.

The following films are available from CMHC regional offices in St. John's, Charlottetown, Halifax, Fredericton, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Edmonton and Vancouver or the regional NFB office where indicated.

Canwel 22 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. A new Canadian pollution-free waste-management system which conserves both water and energy. Available from NFB.

A City Is 15 min., colour, 16 mm, film music only. Canadian cities in the 1970s. Available from NFB and ICOM.

Neighbourhoods 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. The neighbourhoods that make up Toronto. Available from all CMHC regional offices.

Colonel By's Town 17 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. Old Ottawa narrated by former Mayor Charlotte Whitton. Available from CMHC Ontario regional office.

Sir John's Home Town 17 min., colour, 16 mm film, English. A look at the remarkably well-preserved old city of Kingston, Ontario and its new suburban areas. Available from CMHC Ontario regional office and ICOM.

Almost Anyone Can Build a House 20 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. An imaginative approach to construction details. Available from all CMHC regional offices.

Recognizing Your Needs 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. A contrast in the living styles of the young marrieds and an elderly couple in retirement. Available from all CMHC regional offices.

It's Your Move 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English and French. To live in an apartment or to buy a new house. Available from all CMHC regional offices.

What's in a House 14 min., colour, 16 mm film, English. A builder, planner and architect look at housing. Available from all CMHC regional offices.

Co-op Housing: The Best Move We Ever Made 22 min., colour, 16 mm film, English. Describes the co-operative housing alternative. Available from NFB.

Co-op Housing: Getting It Together 23 min., colour, 16 mm film, English. Outlines the experience of developing a housing co-op. Available from NFB.

Canada's Visual History Series

The Visual History Series is a co-operative venture of the History Division, National Museum of Man and the National Film Board. Each of the 31 titles is identified as a "volume" with 30 black and white and colour slides and a bilingual booklet containing a short background essay, discussion of the historical significance of each slide, a reading list, and suggested projects. Currently available volumes on urban topics are:

A. F. J. Artibise. Winnipeg: The Growth of a City 1874-1914.

J. M. S. Careless. Urban Development in Central Canada to 1850.

T. Copp. Poverty in Montreal, 1897-1929.

Orders are handled through: Visual Education Centre, 115 Berkeley Street, Toronto, Ontario M5A 2W8; or Scholar's Choice, 1150 Homer Street, Vancouver, British Columbia V6B 2X8.

Urban Profile Slide Series

The Education Committee of the Canadian Association of Geographers has assembled kits of 20 slides, with English descriptions and an overview essay. Titles presently available are: Montreal, Transport Centre; Hamilton, Steel City; Halifax, Changing Waterfront Uses; Toronto, A Complex Metropolis; Winnipeg, A Prairie Transportation Centre; Thunder Bay; Calgary; Toronto Central Business District. Sherbrooke and Edmonton will appear soon. French versions are available for Montreal and Toronto. Each set is $6.50 and can be ordered from the Canadian Association of Geographers, Burnside Hall, McGill University, 805 Sherbrooke Street West, Montreal, Quebec H3A 2K6. (514) 392-5496.

One of the continuing areas of study by Environment Canada's Lands Directorate is the problem of urban growth, its rate and characteristics, and the impact of the process of urbanization on other land uses. The departmental library endeavours to fill these information needs by collecting in the fields of land classification, land use planning, and urbanization. In addition, many of the environmental problems under study by the department are relevant to urban planners and consequently research materials in such areas as solid waste management, waste water treatment, air pollution problems in urban areas, etc., are collected by the library.

President
Paul Harper
Vice-President/
Secretary-Treasurer
James Moodie
Executive Officer
K. E. Davies

Objectives

In recognition of the importance of developing and maintaining an urban and regional environment of the highest quality, of the vital role of comprehensive planning in this endeavour, and of the need for professional advice and counselling in such planning, the Institute directs itself to fulfil the following purposes toward improving and promoting the practice of planning:

- To show initiative in efforts at all levels to maintain and improve the quality of the environment of Canadian cities and regions;
- To advance and promote the values, use and methods of planning in the development of Canadian cities and regions;
- To promote and maintain high standards of professional planning practice and ethical behaviour in relation to interests of the general public, the profession and the client;
- To encourage communication and co-operation among all professions concerned with improving the quality of the urban and regional environment.

Activities

The Institute is a national federation of ten affiliate organizations representing five provinces and five regions in Canada. Most of its activities are organized on a regional basis and a national conference on selected urban and regional themes is held annually.

Both at the national and affiliate level, the Institute prepares proposals for and comments on legislation, programs and projects in the field of urban and regional planning which are advanced by all levels of government.

Community Planning Association of Canada (CPAC)

425 Gloucester Street
Ottawa, Ontario
K1R 5E9

President
Louis Langlois

(613) 238-7834

Objectives

- To improve the quality of the environment in which people live, to which end the Association:
fosters public understanding of community, urban and regional planning;
encourages the active participation in planning by citizens; and co-operates with other groups on planning matters.
Without limiting the general objective, the Association aims, in particular:
- To promote education in environmental planning in schools and universities and in programs of continuing education;
- To stimulate the development of new knowledge relating to the environment of human settlement through studies and research and the recording of experience;
- To accumulate and disseminate information relevant to policies in environmental planning;
- To co-operate with elected governments, public agencies and other bodies in applying planning concepts and practices to the development of the environment;
- To provide open forums through which government and the citizen can communicate policies, needs and views on planning matters;
- To encourage the co-ordination and integration of public and private programs of planning and development.

Activities

On-going programs in all parts of Canada, including national and provincial conferences and seminars, provincial, regional and local conferences, seminars and meetings.

National and provincial offices provide a "community planning" and "urban affairs" information service to all citizen groups and individuals, including students, whether or not they are members of the Association.

Areas of Concern

Community planning and urban affairs generally. Specifically, programs are designed to assist citizens in identifying the problems and issues in their communities and to provide alternative proposals — "case studies" — for dealing with them.

Resources

Objectives

- The preparation of an index of social science data holdings that exist in machine-readable form and are to be found in Canadian universities, as well as in non-profit research agencies and other bodies conducting social science research.
- The collection from federal and provincial government departments of a continuing description of their holdings and the performance of a liaison role between scholars and government departments.
- The provision of information in response to individual inquiries by referring the inquirer to the source, but not attempting to provide the inquirer with the actual data.
- The provision of technical information necessary for the more effective use of the data.

Areas of Concern

Quantitative research in sociology and anthropology, economics, geography and demography, political science, psychology, history, law and criminology, urban studies, commerce, administration, management, marketing, industrial relations, communications, and related fields involving human variables.

Activities

The Data Clearing House provides bilingual services based on CANISISS, a computerized inventory of data holdings and data centres. A referral service which includes on-line searches of CANISISS is available for individual researchers and organizations seeking information about quantitative social science data files and data centres in Canada. A Social Science Data Inventory containing descriptions of data files is published annually. A pilot edition of the Directory of Social Science Data Centres is in process. The Data Clearing House will also provide specialized services on request. Examples of these services include the compilation, cataloguing and production of special subject-oriented or institutional catalogues of data files and the provision of specialized reference services.

Resources

Initial and development grant from the Canada Council.

Federal government contract, July 1976 – December 1977.

Publications

- A Data Clearing House for the Social Sciences in Canada, a report and feasibility study prepared for the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and the Social Science Research Council of Canada, 1972. Bilingual.
- Bulletin. 1975 — irregular. Bilingual.
- Directory of Social Science Data Centres, 1977 (in preparation). Annual from 1977. Bilingual.
- Social Science Data Inventory, 1st test edition, May 1977. Annual from December 1977. Bilingual.

Administering the Municipal Management Development Program.

Awarding the Vanier Medal to outstanding public servants.

Providing administrative and staff services to the Committee of Schools and Programs in Public Administration.

Developing a Case Program in Public Administration.

Municipal Management Development Program

This program was established in 1975 with funding from the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, the Canadian Association of Municipal Administrators, and IPAC. The director,

Walter Tuohy, was charged with responsibility in the initial eighteen-month phase of the program "to establish the basis for a national resource centre and services for municipal, other levels of government, educational institutions, and other associations acting as a co-ordinator and catalyst for municipal management development." In the year 1976-1977, the program is an information and service one in the areas of information distribution and exchange through a clearing house and communications centre and provision of assistance and advice. A newsletter, Municipal Management Development, reports on studies undertaken within the program as well as highlighting activities of municipalities and individuals engaged in innovative work in this area. A number of reports and surveys have been prepared by consultants and in some provinces a permanent body has been established. Some examples are: Maritime Municipal Management Training and Development Board; Newfoundland Institute for Management Advancement and Training; Ontario Advisory Committee on Local Government Management; British Columbia Municipal Officers Association Education Council.

Case Program in Public Administration

Case Program in Public Administration, directed by Kenneth Kernaghan, is designed to increase the number of Canadian case studies in public policy and in public management for use in universities and government, and to increase the number of teachers and public servants with experience in the writing of cases.

Resource Staff

André Duperron

Doug Hogan

Alan Shefman

Publications

Jo-Anne Knight

Documentation

Joy Mauerhoff

Objectives

- To contribute to the exchange of information between governments in the areas of housing and urban and regional development.

Activities

The following services are offered, free of charge, to the staff members of the federal, provincial and territorial governments and, by subscription, to Canadian municipalities.

Document service: documents collected by the information service are classified and coded according to an internal system described in the ICURR Handbook, copies of which are distributed to the Committee's clientele.

Bibliographic service: computer lists of documents, reports, papers, etc., produced by government departments and agencies are prepared by the information service. These lists contain the following data for each document: title, author, contact or publisher, date of publication, area or region covered, and a brief annotation.

Referral service: information about government projects and programs currently underway may be exchanged where constraints with respect to confidentiality do not limit availability.

Regular publications: sent to approximately 1,500 users in the federal, provincial, territorial and municipal governments.

Informal seminars: by invitation.

Areas of concern

The identification, collection and dissemination of information relating to Canadian government activities in urban and regional research, by means of frequent personal contact between the ICURR staff and the research and technical personnel in governments across Canada. The storage and immediate retrieval of such information, by means of a multiple-access, computerized master file.

Resources

The operating expenses are shared according to a formula under which the federal government contributes 50 percent, and the provinces and territories share the remainder.

Publications

- Calendar — chronological list of meetings and conferences related to urban and regional research activities; published three times a year. Bilingual.
- Card Index — semi-annual list of the titles of the information cards, arranged by subject. Bilingual.
- Handbook — listing of subjects on which information can be provided by the Committee's information exchange service. Bilingual.
- ICURR Directory — organization charts of government departments involved in urban and regional affairs. Updates published at irregular intervals, in the language (or languages) of the government concerned. Bilingual.
- Information Cards — four to seven weekly summaries of government projects or programs in the fields of urban affairs, regional development, housing, planning and related areas. Bilingual.

- Interaction — informal bulletin published every two months. Bilingual.
- Overviews — mini-reviews on topics of current interest, published at irregular intervals. Priced.

Library/Documentation Centre

An extensive file of reports, papers and other documents produced by the federal, provincial and territorial government departments and agencies, with concentration in the fields of urban affairs, regional development, housing and planning. Open to all government personnel.

Urban Land Economics Division

Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration

Chairman

(604) 228-2417

Michael A. Goldberg

Activities

The Division teaches a number of programs at the undergraduate and graduate level leading to the B.Comm., M. Sc. (Business Administration), M.B.A. and Ph.D. Significant emphasis is placed on extra-mural courses. The Faculty offers a four-year diploma course in urban land economics, a certificate in mortgage lending, and provides statutory pre-licensing courses for agents, salespersons and mortgage brokers. The descriptions of the extra-mural courses in real estate have not been reproduced here but are described in the booklet available from the Division.

Courses

Programs of study vary according to the student's interest and selected degree. The following list indicates core courses:

Commerce 307	Urban Land Economics
Commerce 309	Real Estate Finance
Commerce 337	Land Law
Commerce 406	Government Land Policy and Regulation of the Real Estate Industry
Commerce 407	Real Estate Valuation
Commerce 408	Real Estate Investment
Commerce 409	City Growth and Structure
Commerce 492	Policy Analysis and Strategic Management Decision Making
Commerce 494	Business, Government and Society
Commerce 505	Economics of Location
Commerce 507	Contemporary Land Investment Problems
Commerce 508	Government Policy in Relation to Urban Land Ownership
Commerce 509	Mortgage Financing

Research

Urban land economics; land development; land banking and public land ownership; land use controls; residential development and housing markets; commercial and industrial development; real estate finance; real estate appraisal; mortgage finance and mortgage markets; housing, land and urban development policy.

Conferences

The Division hosted a conference in September 1976 on "Recent Perspectives in Urban Land Economics." Similar conferences are planned for 1977.

Publications

The Conference papers have been published as Recent Perspectives in Urban Land Economics: Essays in Honour of Richard U. Ratcliff and Paul F. Wendt, edited by Michael A. Goldberg. Urban Land Economics Division, Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration, University of British Columbia, 1976.

Also available:

Housing: It's Your Move. Housing Study Team, Urban Land Economics Division, Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration, University of British Columbia, 1976. 2 volumes.

The Division publishes a Report Series, currently comprising nearly twenty reports spanning the various research interests of the Division, and a Reprint Series, numbering over thirty papers. A Research Monograph Series includes reports prepared as external contracts for professional associations. A list of faculty publications and student theses is found in the Division's booklet. A publications list is available on request.

Library/Documentation Centre

The Division maintains a small, but growing collection of relevant works, numbering over 2,000 books, reports and reprints and more than a dozen journal subscriptions.

The professors are engaged in a variety of research projects, either individually or as part of the faculty. Some research is carried out by students at the postgraduate level.

Activities

A pedagogical unit comprising three faculty members and some thirty students examines urban development. The professors in this unit supervise seminars and conduct programs of analysis and synthesis in the urban development field.

Conferences

Guest speakers are regularly invited to supplement the curriculum of the urban development unit and to speak on topics of interest to the School at large.

Director

Iskandar Gabbour

Courses

Located in the Faculté de l'Aménagement, the Institute offers a Master's Degree in Urban Planning.

Research

Professors are engaged in research either individually or within the C.R.I.U., a research unit associated with the Faculté de l'Aménagement.

Activities

The Institute's mission has been defined as the following: "to initiate, promote and guide studies and research in urban planning at the university level and to form an information centre in close cooperation with professional, governmental and private agencies which are involved in the urban question."

From its inception, the Institute has focussed on a broad area of concern encompassing various facets of land use.

School of Urban and Regional Planning

Director

(613) 547-3086

Gerald Hodge

Courses

The program of study is a two-year Master's degree in urban and regional planning. The program provides a core of studies, and students complete the program with a number of electives.

Research

The School is oriented to the fields of regional planning and development. A special concern is non-metropolitan regions and small towns and villages. Faculty members' interests encompass regional policy analysis, metropolitan planning, environmental planning, social change and social policy, and legal systems for planning. There is current research in such topics as tourism, suburban land values, revitalization of small towns, techniques of environmental impact assessment and the history of Canadian planning.

Conferences

The School offers a one-week summer institute. The theme for the 1977 session was Canadian small towns and their future planning. Concepts, methodologies, strategies and programs for small-town planning as developed in different parts of Canada were categorized as physical planning, planning for community services, and economic planning and development.

Publications

The journal Plan Canada is edited and published at the School for the Canadian Institute of Planners.

Institute of Local Government

Director

(613) 547-3292

T. J. Plunkett

(613) 547-2618

Courses

While the Institute does not offer formal university credit courses directly, its staff members hold appointments in the Department of Political Studies and the School of Public Administration where such courses are offered. The Director of the Institute assumed the position of Director of the School of Public Administration in July 1977.

For a number of years, the Institute has provided a three-year correspondence course in municipal administration for the Association of Municipal Clerks and Treasurers of Ontario. Staff members of the Institute have also been advising this and other associations on the need for and requirements of other courses and educational undertakings in municipal management and administration.

Frequently, the Institute is consulted by associations and educational institutions outside the province of Ontario with respect to educational programs in local government. For the past year the Institute's Director has served as a member of a Local Government Management Advisory Committee established by TEIGA (Treasury, Economics and Intergovernmental Affairs).

Research and Activities

Research is focussed on the problems of urban local governments. For some time, the emphasis has been on the production of materials for educational programs for local government. There has been very little material available that deals with the structures and process of local government in Canada. The Institute has completed a series of monographs on urban local government to be published by the Institute of Public Administration of Canada. In addition to the monograph series, the Institute, with the financial assistance of the Ministry of State for Urban Affairs, has completed a draft of a text on urban government and management which will be suitable for continuing education programs. This text is currently being tested and revised.

Conferences

The Institute annually sponsors a five-day seminar for senior and middle-management city officials. Upon request, it has organized and directed one and two day seminars for elected and appointed officials in specific cities.

Publications

Urban Focus, a bi-monthly publication of the Institute, has developed a circulation among educators and city and other officials interested in commentary and reports on local government politics and management. The Institute also publishes occasional reference papers on various topics.

Queen's University Archives

Archivist

(613) 547-3226

The Queen's University Archives houses the archives of the city of Kingston, and a wide variety of papers and records related to the urban environment. Among these are the records of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, 1962-1970; records of Kingston

Chamber of Commerce, Association of Women Electors, Kingston Arts Council groups and many others; records of many local businesses and industries such as Calvin, Telt, R. J. Reid, Abramsky, etc; and papers of many local families such as Cartwright, Fairfield, Baxter, Jones and others. Inventories are available for major papers. Archives records are non-circulating.

Courses

The School offers Bachelor and Master of Architecture degrees. The "core problem" approach is used with students in all years spending a considerable proportion of time in designing buildings and building complexes and undertaking the necessary research in the social, political and physical contexts for the new work. In a total of 250 projects each year, almost all are Canadian places and at least half are urban centred.

Department of Urban and Regional Planning

Chairman

(416) 978-2706

Dr. Alan Waterhouse

Courses

The Department offers a Master of Science in Urban and Regional Planning and a Ph.D. program.

Seven core courses are required of students:

1061X Legal Bases of Planning

1057X Metropolitan Planning and Public Finance

1002X Basic Urban and Regional Economic Analysis

1042X Urbanization and Natural Environments

1046X Basic Design for Planners

1001X Introduction to Urban Planning Techniques

1012X Statistics for Planners

Because of the current research and teaching interests of staff, and the requirement for supervision in thesis research, students tend to concentrate on: economic bases of regional planning; resource and ecological bases of regional planning; urban design; planning theory; the management and evaluation of urban plans; and housing.

Research

- A. J. Dakin — Evaluation of planning in the metropolitan Toronto area; telecommunications and society.
- J. Hitchcock, M. Schiff and A. Waterhouse — Housing and neighbourhood services.
- R. Jackson — Urban open space usage: garden allotments; urbanization and its effects on natural environments; the future of second-home usage in Canada.
- A. J. Scott — Urban transport models and policy; contemporary land planning in France.
- A. Waterhouse, M. Schiff, J. R. Hitchcock and A. J. Dakin — Planning for children in cities.

Publications

The Department publishes a series of occasional papers entitled "Papers on Planning and Design", editor A. J. Scott.

Recent titles:

- R. W. McCabe . Shopping Centre Proposals: Some Implications of a Decision by the Ontario Municipal Board. October 1975.
- L. A. Stein. The Relevance of Legal Density Controls in Town Planning to the Human Use of Space. February 1976.

Centre for Urban and Community Studies

150 St. George St.

Director

Professor Larry S. Bourne

(416) 978-2072

The Centre was established by the University in 1964; it is primarily a research institution, emphasizing inter-disciplinary research, and increasingly, applied social research. It attempts to improve communications among researchers and the urban community with on-going seminars and short courses on housing, planning, urban studies and transportation.

Research

Urban systems development and national urban policies; social networks and community support systems; neighbourhood change; land use; and major programs in urban housing markets, migration and ethnic change, the "Child in the City", and transportation.

Conferences

Hosts for urban and transportation research conferences and forums, some international associations and working groups (including Regional Science Association).

The Child in the City Program

(416) 978-6895

Director

William Michelson

Research

The "Child in the City" is an interdisciplinary research and demonstration program sponsored by the Hospital for Sick Children and the University of Toronto. It will examine the implications of change in family structure, housing, population, and legal responsibility as they relate to the health, well-being and opportunities of this and future generations of children. A twelve-part lecture series was held from December 1976 to March 1977. In progress is a one-volume state of the art on the implications of major aspects of social change in the city for children; and one volume presenting the statements and subsequent discussions from the lecture series mentioned above.

Courses

The Joint Program does not offer courses. Faculty members associated with the Joint Program teach through the traditional facilities and departments of the two universities. At the University of Toronto, courses may be chosen from the Institute of Aerospace Studies, Department of Civil Engineering, Department of Geography, Department of Urban and Regional Planning and the Faculty of Management Studies. At York, courses are available in the Faculty of Administrative Studies, Faculty of Environmental Studies, Department of Economics, Department of Geography or Department of Political Science.

Research

The main focus of the Program is on multi-disciplinary study groups. The Joint Program has two major study groups currently supported by the Research and Development Centre of the Ministry of Transport and one multi-disciplinary project under contract with the Centre.

An urban transportation policy impact study is in the third year of research. The dispatch methods in demand-responsive transit systems, including dial-a-bus, variable route buses and shared-ride taxis are being investigated. Individual research projects accepted for funding in 1976-1977 include one on the environmental impact of urban transportation systems. In 1976 summer grants to students' graduate research work went to, among others, a study of transit for new towns, and a catalogue of public transit innovation in Europe and applications to Canada.

Conferences

Transport Canada and the Joint Program sponsored a conference "TELIMOVE — Automated vehicle monitoring" in Toronto in September of 1976. The conference brought together designers, users, and manufacturers of automated vehicle monitoring equipment used in vehicle fleets such as buses, taxis, ambulances, police cars and trains. A post-conference proceedings volume is being produced.

Publications

The Program publishes a Research Report Series, Transportation Reprint, and Working Paper Series as well as Transportation Symposia Papers. Selected titles from the Research Report Series:

Frances Frisken and Gwynneth Emby. Social Aspects of Urban Transportation: A Bibliographic Review. No. 30. September 1975. 279 pp.

Courses

The School offers a Master's and Ph.D. program in regional planning, which includes the problems of urban growth as well as resource use and regional economic development. Students are encouraged to concentrate on one of the following specializations to ensure thesis supervision: environmental planning, land use planning, outdoor recreation planning, planning methodology, regional planning, and social policy planning.

Research

Faculty members research interests reflect a diversity of subjects: social action strategies; urban systems; land ownership and land-use policies in Canada; health and social policy planning; ecology, conservation and resource development; regional planning and development; intergovernmental processes; outdoor recreation; urban-centred regional planning; alternative futures; settlement patterns; rural and agricultural planning; urban fringe problems and policy implications; utility corridor planning; location theory and regional development; community planning law; human and population ecology.

Activities

Graduate Planning Students Association; annual retreat of graduate students; in-career development education program.

Conferences

Annual graduate conference; 1975-SURP "Symposium on Megalopolis".

Publications

Contact, editor Norman E. P. Pressman. Four issues yearly with information on conferences, international developments, new books, recent reports and studies, research in progress.

Each issue contains five to six articles by leading authorities on specialized as well as generalized aspects of urban and environmental affairs, adopting a multi-disciplinary viewpoint. Canadian content is emphasized, as are international events. The journal is bilingual and all articles are referred by an international editorial advisory board.

Working Paper Series began in 1976-1977 under the direction of an editorial board consisting of two graduate students and three faculty members. The series is an outlet for a wide variety of articles and reports not specifically designed for submission to a journal or for publication elsewhere.

Courses

The Division of Social Science and the Departments of Anthropology, Economics, Geography, History, Political Science, Psychology and Sociology offer, under the general honours program, a pattern of studies which combines department specialization in six courses with six or more courses in the field of urban studies. Sample of course selections:

- US 241 Introduction to Urban Studies
  - US 242 Introduction to Planning Concepts and Methods
  - US 342 Recent Urban Development in Ontario
  - US 343 The Nature of Urban Population
  - US 346 Urban Housing
  - US 347 Urban Communications and Networks
  - US 348 Urban Planning in Practice

Research

Population change in the urban field in Toronto.

Faculty of Environmental Studies

Room 552, Scott Library

Dean

Rodger D. Schwass

(416) 667-3252

Courses

The Faculty offers a Master's degree. The student selects an area of concentration. Theme areas representing the collective efforts of faculty members have been identified as: environment and behaviour; man-environment impact; northern studies; planning/design/management; policy, politics and change.

Research

Faculty members have a variety of research interests: environmental impact assessment; public transportation policy; recreational spaces; social indicators; environmental education; participation of apartment dwellers in urban decision making; personal space and the design of public spaces, especially airports, recreation facilities and shopping centres; neighbourhood change in Canadian cities; condominium management; perceptions and attitudes in resource and environmental management.

Conferences

York University held a conference in May 1977 on urban innovation: working solutions to the problems of human settlements. The Faculty was heavily involved in the planning of the conference.

Publications

The Faculty is compiling a mailing list for distribution of a newsletter describing research in progress and conferences taking place at the University. It has also begun a Student Discussion Paper series. A list of current titles is available on request.

Documentation Centre

Assistant

(416) 667-6454

Debbie Zakus

The Faculty maintains a small collection of current interest research and articles. It is used primarily by students requiring material for research. The centre does not duplicate the Scott Library collection.
